I hope you're Dave and if I had to pick, I'd more than likely choose the side that the truth lies somewhere in the middle. But I'd kick myself if I knew there was a possibility of a bad scenario going down and then just simply chose to echo Bob or simply say that it isn't going to happen. It sure as heck can't hurt to be somewhat prepared is how I look at it.

I have never lost a night of sleep over it but it sure sounds like Bob has, I mean, according to him.....it is a "Doomsday Scenario."<snicker>

Propagation Forecast Bulletin 15 ARLP015
>From Tad Cook, K7RA

SB PROP ARL ARLP015
ARLP015 Propagation de K7RA

Today the bulletin is out on Thursday, April 9, because ARRL Headquarters is closed tomorrow on the Good Friday holiday.

Just as we reported in the last three bulletins, again there were no sunspots this week. In this time of the quiet Sun, Spaceweather.com has a new feature keeping track of all these days with no spots. On the left side of the page at http://www.spaceweather.com below the image of the Sun and the current daily sunspot number, it says "New: Spotless Days." Early on April 9 it says "Current Stretch: 14 days, 2009 total: 89 days (87%), Since 2004: 597 days, Typical Solar Min: 485 days."

But if we show no spots in this bulletin plus the past three, that accounts for at least 28 days, so why do the new Spotless Days numbers say it has been 14 spotless days since the last sunspot? The last run of sunspots we show is over two days, March 6-7, so through yesterday, April 8, there have been 32 spotless days.

If we use the archive feature on the Spaceweather page (look in the upper right side of the page) and go back to March 26, although Spaceweather shows the sunspot number is zero, the text beneath the Daily Sun image says "A proto-sunspot is struggling to emerge at the circled location." So if no sunspots emerge later today, April 9, that would account for 14 days since March 26.

Recently the 45 day forecast for daily solar flux and planetary A index at http://www.swpc.noaa.gov/ftpmenu/forecasts/45DF.html has consistently predicted a solar flux at 70 for every day into the future. The last of these was on March 24.

Then on March 25 the prediction was for solar flux at 72 for March 28-31. On March 26 that changed showing solar flux at 72 on March 28 through April 2. On March 27 the solar flux rose to 72 (actually 71.6) and the forecast was the same, but extended the 72 number through April 3. Solar flux has not reached 72 since then, but the March 28 forecast extends the reading of 72 through April 4.

On March 29 it extends to April 5, and on March 30 to April 6. On March 31 it extends 72 until April 9, three additional days, but it also shows a new period with a flux of 72, April 23 to May 6. April 1 is the same, but April 2 the flux is dropped to 71 for April 3-9. The April 3 prediction gives up on the slightly higher flux values for the near term, but still predicts 72 for April 23 to May 6. The forecast remains the same until April 7, when the 72 flux for April 23 to May 6 is shortened to April 23-29. So it appears that even these near term predictions for a very small increase in activity are continually revised downward.

In the April 8 forecast, it shows the planetary A index for April 9-10 at 15 and 8, then dropping to 5 until April 21. Early on April 9 we are experiencing the effects of a solar wind stream, and planetary K index rose from 3 to 4 at 0300z.

Geophysical Institute Prague predicts quiet to unsettled conditions April 10, quiet April 11-14, quiet to unsettled April 15, and unsettled April 16.

Robin McNeill, ZL4IG of Invercargill, on New Zealand's South Island has been on HF for about a year, and is another of many new operators I am hearing from who are enjoying HF propagation at the bottom of the sunspot cycle.

Robin wrote, "With the sunspots and thus the MUF as very low as they are, surely this means that 40 meters is currently as good as it ever gets? In fact, shouldn't 40 meters currently be as good as any band ever gets? I base this assertion on the fact that 40 meters is currently very close to the MUF and, as you note in the last bulletin, there are now few QRN causing solar events."

He continues, "But that doesn't explain why only a handful of European superstations and very few others find their signals into ZL for hams like me on 40 meters with modest wire antennas and urban QRM, even using the grey line. (That said, I have had a handful of QRP SSB QSOs into Europe recently, though I was working hams who have 3-el beams with presumably low QRM locations- one of them, in fact, seemed surprised I was running 5 watts PEP and not 500 watts PEP output, which surprised us both). Or have I overlooked something?"

40 meters is a good band right now, but it isn't "as good as any band ever gets." When solar activity returns, the MUF will rise enough to use the 10-20 meter bands, which typically will have less absorption than 40 meters. In addition, the average ham is more likely to have greater antenna efficiency on the higher HF bands.

Another factor affecting Robin is that Europe is clear on the other side of the planet from him. For instance, from his location to England is over 19,000 km (over 11,000 miles) away. Yet Los Angles is over 11,500 km (nearly 7,200 miles) from him.

If we do some propagation projections using W6ELprop using a smoothed sunspot number of 3 for today, it shows a very narrow period of strong signals over the path to England, from 1900-1930z, when the MUF is 10.9-11.2 MHz. A couple of hours later the MUF briefly reaches a peak of 14.7 MHz.

But for the path to Los Angeles, a 40% shorter route, the opening is very strong on 40 meters from 0530-1430z, and then MUF reaches a peak of 22.4 MHz at 2330z. In fact, toward Los Angeles, 20, 17 and 15 meters are good possibilities as well, but not on the path to England.

Carl Zelich, AA4MI of Chuluota, Florida sent a tip about an interesting NASA presentation called, "NASA Science Update to Discuss Anatomy of Solar Storms," at 1:00 PM EDT (1700z) on Tuesday, April 14. You can watch this live on NASA TV on the internet at http://www.nasa.gov/multimedia/nasatv/. In many areas NASA TV is carried on basic cable via academic research channels, such as the University of Washington's UWTV in Seattle. For the complete NASA announcement, check http://tinyurl.com/cyorsd.

Another message in, this time from Rich Zwirko, K1HTV of Amissville, Virginia, about the joys of the extended solar minimum and the resulting quiet geomagnetic field.

Rich writes, "I'm now in my 4th month of retirement. I retired after 48 years in broadcasting (the last 28 at the Voice of America). Based on what the 'experts' were saying a number of years ago, I figured that soon after retirement I would be using the F2 layer to add more DX countries to my 148 country total on 50 MHz. Boy, were the experts wrong!"

He continues, "Well, as they say, if life hands you lemons, make lemonade. With the extended solar minimum and very low MUF numbers, my lemonade is being made on 160 Meters. Shortly after retirement my XYL Phyllis (K1WSN) and I moved to a new QTH in Virginia. The first antenna to go up was a 160 meter Inverted-L. At the old Maryland QTH I had worked 200 countries on the Topband with 100 Watts."

Rich goes on to say, "After 6 weeks of operating, five new ones have been added to the K1HTV 160 meter low power country total. They include K5D, CP4BT, OA4TT, T2OU and, a few days ago, VK9GMW on Mellish Reef became 160 Meter country #205."

He ends with, "So, keep the solar minimum going. We Topband folks are loving it!"

Thanks, Rich. I recall some years ago when our propagation bulletin reported constant geomagnetic storms, week after week. Those in higher latitudes, like much of Canada and especially Alaska, had almost no HF communications as a result. We've almost forgotten what those times were like!

Another great and positive message, forwarded by KF7E, who says, "this man is clearly an optimist for whom 'the glass is half full,' never half empty. It is a refreshing viewpoint." His friend Mickey, K5ML of Paradise Valley, Arizona lives in a development with a strict homeowner's association, and that means "No Antennas Allowed."

Mickey writes, "Got back on the air in January '07 after being QRT for over 2 decades. I was told that we were at the bottom of the sunspot cycle but the cycle would be turning up soon. There has been no significant upturn in the cycle since then. However, since getting back on the air using a ground mounted vertical and very low wire antennas, I've worked 206 countries and 39/40 zones. And I know from experience that it's much easier to work DX with a beam or a quad."

He ends with, "Like everyone else, I'd like to see the sunspots come back. But the other day a question popped into my mind: 'When the sunspots return, what am I going to work then that I'm not working now?' We will work DX on higher frequencies more frequently than now, but that's about it. I'm beginning to think all this talk about sunspots is overrated. I'm glad I didn't wait for the sunspots to come back before getting back on the air."

Thanks, Mickey!

No problem for me - I live in the LA area and am within 5 miles of an Air Force Space & Missile Base and 3 major defense contractors. All I would need to do is go outside, watch the beautiful fireball and be quickly incinerated.

585. Re: Visiting EMP Again - EMP_areas.jpg (0/1)

Back in the mid-80's a debate team from Georgia State, in Atlanta, spent an entire year researching debate arguments by thoroughly combing the EMP literature. They had some interesting evidence that one nuclear blast 100 miles above the surface of the US would effectively disarm the entire US nuclear force by taking out electronic components in both missile guidance systems and in the electronics of the detonation systems. They ran a case arguing for the unilateral nuclear disarmament of the US by deliberate air bursting a nuke weapon. They also had evidence that US scientists have considered the possibility of EMP air-bursts to prevent incoming nuclear weapons (from the Soviet Union) from detonating when targeted at the US. Supposedly much of the research on this is classified.

They were pretty successful with the case until other teams were able to find evidence that both US and Soviet tactical planners had planned for the possibility of EMP-led disarmament by maintaining small fleets of nuclear-tipped ICBMs that had no solid state electronics in them. At least through the mid-80's, both the US and Soviet Union maintained small missile fleets that used vacuum tubes, which are much less susceptible to EMP degradation. So, potentially, EMP could prevent Doomsday.

In the late 70's and early 80's, the US conducted much testing of subs pulling devices that produced an EMP without nuclear blasts. Though the reseach effort has been documented and confirmed, the results remain classified today.

Interesting topic, but I wonder why LazySuzy never posts about shortwave.

Burr,

Do you care to bet your Drake receiver against my Eton E1 on whether or not that impeachment will actually take place?

I mean if you think the Dems will impeach him, it should be a sure thing, right?

If you'd like to wager something else on this impeachment taking place, let me know. Personally, I think there's a much higher chance that Bush and Cheney will be facing criminal trials within six months.

I hope life is treating you well,

Mike

Mike, i for one don't care how many letters that man has after his name.
if the BC was a phony, the repugs would have jumped all over it during the election. most of these people spend too much time listening to hate radio. as Steve said, the best man won, get over it.

BTW, i see you got some bad weather again in Kentucky. hope your OK.

Probably. Obama has to come up with some distraction to keep the attention away from his disasterous policies.

The Ground Based Answer has always been Launch-on-Launch When their Many Missiles are at the 100 Mile Boost Phase : YOU LAUNCH.

The Air Based Answer is for the most part a too-little-too-late {after-the-fact} retaliation.
The American Homeland has been destroyed.

The Sea Based Answer is the FMB Subs with 24 D5 'MIRV' Missiles on them and 7 at Sea at any one time {24*7 = 168}

Oops the MIRV Factor X8 = 1344 Targets

FWIW - One Trident Sub setting in the ocean 3000 Miles 'off' of North Korea has the potential of delivering Warheads to 192 Targets in the DPRK.

Drifter,

I believe Obama was clearly born in Hawaii. The re-prints of his local birth announcement in a Honolulu newspaper are pretty persuasive, unless you think a conspiracy involving time travel took place to plant evidence. There is a very legalistic explanation of why he might be considered a British-Kenyan citizen due to that being his father's citizenship status and his mother being underage (a legal provision which no longer exists) thus being too young to convey automatic US citizenship to her child. Sounds like a stretch, but there might be a case in that context.

But even if it's true, there's no mechanism to apply it to removing Obama from the Presidency, particularly after the election. A Congress controlled by his own party won't do it. The Supreme Court has no desire to get involved after the heat they felt for 2000. Most Republican legislators wouldn't even support such an attempt due to the public outcry at trying to remove a popular minority President.

He won the election. The Republicans are smart enough to realize that they'd be much better off focusing on 2012 instead of jousting with unenforceable legalism. At least, they'd better be.

Nice hearing from you, Drifter.

PIRATES AND PRESIDENT PANTYWAIST

The opening stanza of the Marine Corps hymn is: "From the Halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli, we fight our country's battles in the air, on land and sea."

The "Halls of Montezuma" refers to the assault on Chapultapec Castle on September 13, 1847 during the Mexican-American War (1846-1848), by the small Marine contingent led by Captain Silas Casey in Gen. Winfield Scott's army. Ninety percent of the officers and NCOs who led the assault were killed. The red stripe on the dress uniform trousers of Marine officers is in commemoration of the blood their predecessors shed that day.

"To the shores of Tripoli" refers to the Marine role in Thomas Jefferson's war against the Barbary pirates. Now we are faced with another war with pirates. Will the current president learn any lesson from history?

Why do you have to be such a turd Jim. By your own admission, you served two tours in Vietnam. And I commend you for your service.
Because of that I cut you some slack. Now here we are, faced with a momental decision. Cave in to pirates or kick their ass. Which strategy which would you propose Hussein Obama follow?

I maintain that it is ludicrous to think that the CIA, NSA, FBI, and any number of other alphabet agencies would not vet any and all candidates for high federal office. Think about it.. do you really think that these agencies would allow anyone with a questionable record to run for high office? At least they would want to make sure the candidate met all the legal criteria to run (ie citizenship, lack of criminal record, etc.).

Jesus Christ, you people are fucking idiots.

My name's not Jim, I have never served in Nam, I have never claimed to have served in "Nam.

I'm also a fucking adult, unlike you aged children idiots that continually post here who seem to think that life is like a John Wayne movie. For Christ's sake, grow up. Get a functioning brain somewhere. This is not 1847. The solution is no longer to kill everyone at the drop of a fucking hat.

I don't have any use for scumbag pirates, but we don't have to be strutting macho monsters, either. This is not a comic book. It's the real world.

What makes you think the CIA and NSA have anything to do with

I wonder what became of that iPod that B HO gave the Queen of England,,, and those DVDs that B HO gave to that other (what's his name?) person in England?

I might email ask that married Irish woman (married to that Irish guy) wayyyyy over yonder across the big pond in Bognor Regis, West Sussex County, England.Maybe she knows.

That reminds me, her birthday is April 22, I best get on the stick and snail mail her a Happy Birthday card.She is about 54/55 years old.

I'll add, strange to me that you would call that a "doomsday scenario." Say worse case scenario and it would go down exactly like the "ones in the know" or the "experts" say....not like Expert Echo Charlie says.;-)

You think that is a doomsday scenario? Maybe it would be if you weren't prepared. I have a 74 Pontiac Ventura, my first car, that wouldn't be impacted by an EMP blast....if indeed it would affect everything solid state like the "experts" say. So, I would still be cruising while the SUV's and Hummers and Land Rovers etc. etc. would be sitting in their driveway. I'd rather it not be my every day car, but in that situation, no problemo here.

I'd still have four receivers that would not be impacted. I Have more than enough food and more than enough water and the skills to handle the food and water if I were to use up all my supplies (which I doubt). I take it odd that you call that a doomsday scenario, maybe for the ones that call it far fetched....lol....they would crap their panties. ;-)

Back in the 70s I remember ads for EMP protected HF antennas in the professional literature.

Twenty years ago I had a pair of solid-state EMP protected surplus RACAL HF receivers rated for 5,000volts at the antenna input.

More recently I have been involved in developing Air Traffic Control systems which were totally solid-state and EMP protected - one system survived two direct lightning strikes that I witnessed.

And, I had the opportunity to tour a current generation warship a couple of years ago and was struck by the EMP protection evident throughout the vessel.

Solid state electronics and high energy pulse protection has come a long way in the last half century.

That's what I've often wondered Brenda Ann, is if they would even let the people know. Out where I live, if the bomb was coming from the east, I along with not many that live here in the village, would make a bee line out to the state route that is a longgggg and I mean long stretch of road (over a hundred+ miles). No curves, no hills, nothing.
In that scenario I would imagine anyone "in the knows" of what was going to happen would be driving just about as fast as they could.

I know I could definitely cruise to at least a mile and a half per minute, which if I had thirty minutes would give me and others quite a good chance, real good chance.....and that is if the bomb literally landed right smack on top of my village. If the bomb literally landed on Cincinnati I feel I would be safe because Cincy is roughly 30-35 miles of me, a little drive down the road should keep me out of danger.I just hope it never happens. ;-)

I'll add this B.A. - I wonder how hard it would be for the gubiment to keep it a secret. Something of that nature, I don't know. It would be really super easy or super hard to keep it quiet IMO.

If your response was to me Dave, make no mistake about it, I know it

I have an AOR AR-3000A in perfect physical and operational condition. I am the original owner and purchased the radio in June 1993. This radio receives continuously from 100 kHz-2036 MHz in all modes (USB, LSB,CW,AM,NFM,WFM). The radio has been in a nonsmoking environment and has absolutely no problems regarding its operational status. I will also include the operators manual, power supply, original box for the radio, Because I have transitioned into HAM radio I don't use this radio much anymore so I have decided to put it up for sale. I am asking $400.00 + shipping for this excellent radio. Other reasonable offers will be considered.

Chinas hasn't had a catastrophic crop failure in decades and the standard of living in China's rural areas (where the bulk of the population still resides to the tune of 55% - 60%) is dismal compared to the larger cities. China instituted population control well in advance of its recent prosperity so that negates any sort of wealth-population control. Couple that with sex-selective abortions which has created an immense gender-imbalance which helps to slow population growth and the wealth-population issue less important to the other considerations. In the case of India and China it's far too late for wealth-population to have any real effect. If those 2 countries suffer simultaneous catastrophic crop losses they'll walk all over their smaller neighbours for food.

Play up the victim image, Kim-il Telemundoh!

If I was talking about hoarding food or eating all the time then

You need to grab a dictionary or thesaurus as see that "gluttony" refers to more that food. But such a thing is well beyond capacity to comprehend. But thank you for showing us that you a glutton for punishment.

Since you brought this up out the blue this means it is an

It figures that you would refer to an useless test but you do seem to Reality would be a major hinderance to the kooktardic way of life, AKA living in a fantasy world where the Obama BC story is taken seriously.

As it is with all the other kooktard claims.

I'll add this B.A. - I wonder how hard it would be for the gubiment to keep it a secret. Something of that nature, I don't know. It would be really super easy or super hard to keep it quiet IMO.

1) it's pretty easy to keep a secret for half an hour

2) remember, you would not be the only one trying to run, and people get very sloppy at 90 MPH.

3) Living outside a large city is no guarantee you're not ground zero.. there are plenty of targets in rural areas, too.

Now now, he's not typical at all, most kooktards are harmless blowhards that are all talk and no action, like Telemundoh. Sadly, there are a few who totally go off the deep end. Seems like he was showing signs of severe mental illness for some time, but nothing was done.

Its worth remembering, that in the Treaty of Tripoli that resolved the matter, signed by President Adams and ratified by 100% of the US Senate, it says:"The United States is not a Christian Nation".

We dont havta love our enemies. Now, as to how to handle Somalia....
Sail the hardest target we have, a battleship, into a Somali harbor.

Have a large brothel, a casino, and a recreational drug store on board. They get to fuck white pussy if they provide information on where the pirate leaders are. Launch drones from the battle ship to take their asses out. Use the ship as the recruiting headquarters of a mercenary army to take over the whole area.

Also have a gynecology clinic on board for Somali women. If anyone plans an attack on the ship, the women will rat on them. If anyone plans an attack on what is the only brothel with white pussy, the men will rat on them. Give the most reliable sources of info their own cell phones.

Oh I don't know kooktard, what do you think? Oh that's right you don't think. Looks like you have a dilemma there.

We have a standing joke about that over here. We tend to make light of his pitiful firecracker nukes.. if one made it to Alaska, it might possibly melt an igloo... :)

Mike.

Great every thing is fine on your end. I'm not a lawyer, but, i can see nothing in the Constitution that would really cover this.
most of it is sour grapes. some people just can't get with the idea of a black American in the white house. i meet the man 3 different times during the election. i found him vary intellectual, and on top of things. this was so important for an independent like myself. i couldn't take the other side, the old man screwed over the vets just too many times. and that Caribou Barbie was too much of a phony for me. i don't expect to like everything the new prez does, but i will give him a chance before i jump. unlike the old man, he puts the country before his party. so, i'm holding my breath; anyone could do better than the last clown we had. i believe most people don't have an understanding of what it takes to be prez. it really is on-the-job-training. so, lets hope for the best.

Couple or three something years ago, I read an article on the net about what would happen if an EMP went off way up in the air somewhere over Texas, I think the article said Brownsville,Texas.I will see can I find that article again.I probally emailed that article to myself, but I have thousands of articles in all six of my different WebTV user names thingys that I emailed to myself over the last ten years or so.It will be like looking for a needle in a haystack.

Republicans are amazing. They simply look the other way when GW Bush authorizes the Air Force to gather and get the Saudi royal family out of the US on 9/12/01 and has the royal family to his ranch on summer holiday, but have Obama stoop a little to reach the short king's hand and they go convulsive.

Typical republican't response.... It's how all churches work! They avoid the subject and use pear pressure and intimidation to accomplish their goals instead of intelligent debate.

There is plenty of projecting on your part posting an ignorant idiot you

That's good one.

I've worked in the mil electronics industry for a long time and most of it has to pass extensive ESD, lightning, EMP testing. Any signifiant distance from the blast zone this equipment will survive.

Same for your radios that are not plugged into either the AC mains or antenna. Radios connected at the time to large SW antennas may not make it. If the radio is sitting on a shelf, has a metal case and is not connected to wiring of any sort it will survive no problem. Chances are radios with a plastic case sitting on a shelf not connected to anything will also survive.

President tele-prompter is sooo smart he even thanked himself in a speech. This guy is a slow learner and now we get to pay the price for it.

McCain was unelectable. I could not vote for him either. Half the republicans out there could not bring themselves to vote for McCain and that's reason we now have the obominator. McCain sold his soul a long time ago.

The latest on the obomination vet agenda is to force vets to use their private medical insurance in instead of using their the veterans benefits. You think this is fair treatment of out vets? I don't.

Arrogance and stupidity go hand in hand with the obomination where the head of the veterans administration even made a statement after the meeting with obomination he was so put off by him. Just what we need, an arrogant, stupid president that will not listen to reason.

What's to like about the guy? He is a liberal and means to follow through on the liberal agenda. This is the wrong guy at the wrong time and will just use any problem or crisis to promote more socialism.

The obomination already makes Bush look smart. The obominator will not be ready for this job 4 years from now.

711. Pastor Melissa Scott's pornographic past gets reported.

For anyone who has listened to shortwave... oh for 4 minutes.. will no doubt run across Melissa Scott's preaching. Rumors everywhere said she had a pornographic past as "Barbie Bridges". Anyhow, a website has done a through research into this.

http://www.marieclaire.com/world-reports/news/latest/melissa-scott-porn-pastor

Pastor Melissa Scott presides over a televangelist empire. Hard to believe that she was once a triple-X plaything known as Barbie Bridges. Gretchen Voss uncovers the true story behind Scott's divine reinvention.

Most folks drive right past the gritty stretch of downtown Los Angeles that houses University Cathedral, a former movie palace whose marquee now advertises weekly evangelical sermons. But on any given Sunday, several hundred parishioners converge here for a rousing service that has them swaying and shouting Hallelujah!, enraptured by the low, breathless calls for salvation from Melissa Scott. The unlikely stunner who leads this congregation, Scott, 40, struts the stage clutching a red-leather Bible, periodically flinging her endless chestnut locks. Her doe-eyed image is beamed to local cable stations — she is a late-night staple — courtesy of six TV cameras flanking the pulpit. "Before I found God's word, when things got bad, what did I have? I had friends and family forsake me," she cries, directing her followers to Deuteronomy 33:25. In unison, they bark, "Tough shoes for a tough road!" Ninety minutes later, she slips offstage and is whisked by security out of the building through a private passageway.

Scott knows a thing or two about tough roads. Four years ago, she lost her husband, Dr. Gene "Doc" Scott, the wildly popular "shock jock of televangelism" — nearly 40 years her senior — to complications from prostate cancer. In his heyday as pastor, Doc Scott reportedly collected $1 million a month in donations and amassed an empire that included two horse ranches, a 35,000-square-foot mansion in Pasadena, a private plane, and a collection of luxury cars. Shortly after his funeral, Doc Scott's comely young wife assumed University's pulpit. But after her first sermon, someone anonymously mailed churchgoers Easter cards featuring snapshots of a porn star named Barbie Bridges, who looked remarkably similar to Pastor Melissa Scott. One image showed the woman with her legs spread wide, Virgin Mary and baby Jesus postage stamps covering her privates. Another featured a "See you Sunday!" banner plastered across her bare chest; underneath, it read: "The Church Where You Can Do Anything ... Anything."

The mailing sparked a revolt. Scott's Wikipedia page was so vandalized, it had to be removed; Web newsgroups devoted to the church were overrun by users posting more damning photos. ("Who else wants to bang the bejesus out of Pastor Melissa Scott?" inquired one.) Already stinging from the regime change following Doc Scott's death, some demanded her resignation. Others claimed she was a walking billboard for the redemptive powers of faith. But Scott would cop to nothing, dismissing the incident as an expert Photoshop job, part of a sick smear campaign by religious nuts. She even trotted out a Hollywood attorney to threaten her congregants with lawsuits should any more anonymous missives materialize. It seemed as if Scott had joined the long, sordid list of disgraced televangelists like Jimmy Swaggart, Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker, and, most recently, Ted Haggard, ousted from his Colorado church following allegations that he solicited a male prostitute. But unlike those toppled icons, Scott clung to her denial and carried on preaching.

In the years that followed, Scott avoided answering any more questions about Barbie Bridges — until now.

I am consumed with my work," says Pastor Melissa Scott, soothing her raspy throat with sips of warm water. She's sitting in a private chamber at the church, decorated to look exactly like the tack room where her husband kept his saddlebred horses, replete with royal blue felt walls studded with reproductions of British foxhunts. Having wrapped up her Sunday sermon only a half-hour earlier, she's still wearing a thick layer of makeup — a worked-over blemish on her chin cracks the otherwise pristine veneer. In person, Scott is warmer than her haranguing pulpit persona. She smiles often and broadly, revealing impeccably white, straight teeth, the product of braces and bleaching. But her cordiality can't mask the occasional hard edges — the stern glance at a colleague who digs into his lunch before saying grace, the firm that's-all-you're-getting-from-me pause that punctuates her oblique answers to softball questions about her upbringing. "I moved around a lot, kind of hodgepodge, everywhere," she says. Any brothers or sisters? "Right now I'm kind of disconnected from my family. Religion should bring people together, but sometimes it tears people apart," she says cryptically.

It was in this room, she says, that she first met Dr. Scott — that's how she refers to her late husband — introduced by a mutual friend after services one Sunday back in the mid-'90s. Dr. Scott asked her if she had any hobbies. Stamp collecting, she said. Turns out, he collected stamps, too. "He said, 'I'd love to see your collection, and I'd love to show you mine.' I've never been so embarrassed. He's got these award-winning rarities; he's showed them to the Queen, showed them internationally" — unlike the ordinary post-office stamps filling her store-bought albums. "But that was our common thing, and from there things just kind of developed," she says. By 1998, they were an item. Dr. Scott ordained her his administrative pastor, though she had no formal theological training. Two years later, they wed in Reno. He was 70; she was 32. A month later, he was diagnosed with cancer. "I'm the fruit of his lifelong ministry. He birthed me," Scott says, choking up.

Scott is a markedly different preacher from Dr. Scott, who was prone to off-color rants about everything from UFOs to his ex-wife ("the devil's sister," he called her). Her sermons are more pedagogical, often involving whiteboards crammed with Hebrew and Aramaic — Scott claims she's taught herself 20 languages. The academic approach resonates with her supporters. "I've just begun listening to Pastor Melissa Scott, and it feels like I'm finally being fed real food after starving for so long," one fan commented on a Christian newsgroup. "As for those who would criticize her for any transgressions in her past, who are you to judge her?"

Asked about the Barbie Bridges matter, Scott smacks her berry-stained lips and scoffs. "It's definitely a freak show. I've seen a good portion of the stuff on the Internet, and honestly, I almost have to laugh at it," she says, flashing the smile again. Pressed further, Scott sighs deeply, then adds, "Okay, I was never an actress in a pornographic movie. So what does that do? You defend that, what else do you start defending?"

That said, Melissa Scott really was a porn star, as confirmed by several acquaintances who knew her when she worked the adult-entertainment circuit as Barbie Bridges. Though it's unclear when she adopted the moniker, by 1994 she'd already nabbed a title — Miss Nude CanAm Exotic — under the name. She posed nude, as Barbie Bridges, for Penthouse lensman Earl Miller and famed erotic photographer Suze Randall. At the time, Scott was married to Paul Pastore, who worked for an exotic-dancing agency called Fantasy Creations before launching a porn distribution outfit called Barbie Bridges Enterprises. (Among its titles: Backdoor Diaries and Heidi's High Heeled Hookers.) "If she doesn't want to talk about [her past in porn], then I'd rather not talk about it. Whatever she wants to do and say, that's fine with me," says Pastore, reached at his West Hollywood office, where he still works in adult entertainment.

Scott didn't cultivate her relationship with Dr. Scott in church, say former associates, but at his California ranch, where the fiery televangelist frequently entertained nude models like Penthouse Pet Chloe Jones and Playboy Playmate Elke Jeinsen. Congregants dubbed them his "pony girls," because he often filmed them riding his stallions in thong bikinis and broadcast the footage during televised sermons. ("Now that you see what I got waitin' for me at home," he told the audience, "you should all be extra nice to me for comin' down here to talk to ya.") "Melissa was there, always dancing for Doc topless, showing her tits right away," recalls Jeinsen, now a swimsuit model and sometime actress.

Doc often paid his pony girls to attend church, where they acted as a kind of cheerleading squad. "[Melissa] sat in the front row in skimpy outfits. When she came around, I just thought, gold digger," says Christian Shaw, son of Playboy bunny Christine Shaw, a longtime girlfriend of Doc Scott. He says Melissa's life in porn was an open secret. "Doc was big on forgiveness, and he wasn't tripping on her past. She was absolutely Barbie Bridges." Before long Melissa was singing on Doc Scott's broadcasts. Then she relaxed her big, curly hair and traded the thigh-high minis for turtlenecks and pantsuits. By the late '90s, Doc abandoned the pony-girl parties altogether and embraced Melissa as his sole girlfriend.

While Doc was a character, active in local politics, his widow is largely unknown in town. After services, she essentially disappears. Scott will not disclose where she lives, although she allows it is not at her late husband's Pasadena "church parsonage," recently listed for $17 million. "I am very much a recluse," she admits. She is constantly shadowed by a security detail, which enforces the church's strict reservation-only attendance policy. Cameras are expressly forbidden inside. "I have stalkers, people who are obsessed with me," Scott notes.

Some parishioners just don't get it. "I think she'd have a much bigger congregation if she came clean," says a former member who requested anonymity for fear of reprisal. "People would have more respect for her if she said, 'Yes, that was me, but I've repented and turned to Christ.' Instead it's, 'What else are you lying about?'"

But Pastor Scott simply won't. She points to the stained-glass window depicting the scene from John 20 in which Jesus appears to Doubting Thomas, the apostle who demands proof of Jesus's resurrection. Everyone, Pastor Scott coos, has a little Doubting Thomas in them. She pulls the Bible from her lap, licks the tips of her fingers, and flips through the worn pages. "Only three chapters [of the Bible deal with] God's perfection," she says, pinching off a small section. "The rest deals with man's fall and bringing man back. I want people to be able to start over, start a brand-new life. How do you do that if you're condemning them? God is a god of second chances."

A slow grin spreads. "I'm at perfect peace about where I am and what I'm doing. I feel that I fit right in this time and this moment." And with that, Pastor Melissa Scott rises to go. A dozen security guards standing sentinel in the hallway spring to attention and hustle her out of the building.

No, I won far more than I lost. And tripping over a kook's foot and

Incredible isn't it. I just shake my head because all the people that ragged Bush (some of it deservingly).....you'll never hear them utter a word when their Messiah not only does the same thing, after promising not to, but taking it totally to another level.

Should be interesting and exciting either way IMO. ;-)

If the "guilty" white liberals who rule America insist that they must have a Kaffir for President, couldn't they have found one who isn't related to animals???

Dominic Tobin

BARACK OBAMA’s half-brother has been refused entry to Britain after reportedly being accused of an attempted sex attack on a 13-year-old girl on his last visit.

Samson Obama, who runs a mobile phone shop in Nairobi in Kenya, was on his way to the president’s inauguration in January when he tried to stop over in Britain to visit relatives. But he was turned away by immigration officers who declined to issue a visa on the grounds of deception.

Biometric tests carried out at East Midlands airport showed that he was linked to the attack on a girl in Berkshire last November but never charged, according to a report last night. Further checks identified Samson as the half-brother of President Obama, leading to a hurried call to the White House.

A Home Office source told the News of the World: “This was obviously an extremely sensitive issue when it was flashed up by the database.” Officers had noticed that one of the documents that Samson had supplied with his visa application was false which led them to make further inquiries, according to a Home Office spokesman.

Details on the database suggested that he was the same man who had been arrested by police in Berkshire after approaching a group of young girls, including a 13 year-old, and allegedly trying to sexually assault one of them, the News of the World reported.

He then followed the girls into a cafe where he became aggressive and was asked to leave by the owner. Police were called and Samson was arrested. He reportedly gave officers false identification details and supplied his mother’s address in Bracknell.

Last night a Home Office source said: “The individual applied for a visa which we refused. We considered that to issue a visa in this situation would not be conducive to the public good. He was refused a visa on deception grounds.”

Who would have thunked it? Can you really say you're surprised? I've heard her in passing while tuning through but I have never actually stopped to listen.

I'll have to say, I was shocked on the day that Gene died, it made for some pretty dramatic listening IMO. Sounds like she is doing well and keeping the empire marching forward.

I'm fine thanks for your concern. You do need to get back on your

That's just another supremely stupid move to appoint a pro abortionist as ambassador to the Vatican. What the hell is the obominator smoking these days.

It's going to take more than that - something like this:

"Want to Kill HD Radio?"

"Let’s say that radio companies have to start paying royalties on the music that they play. Even if it is a flat percentage of all revenue like other outlets are going to be charged, HD Radio streams would do nothing more than serve to drive up royalty payments for NAB members. The overwhelming majority of terrestrial listeners ARE NOT listening to HD Radio. Ads on HD Radio will be dirt cheap for a very long time. The HD streams may not be able to cover royalty on music from ad revenues. Do you think that Clear Channel will continue to pump money in to HD Radio equipment, expanding services and coverage if the payoff in the end is an INCREASE in copyright royalties and nothing more?"

http://dualsub.wordpress.com/2007/11/11/want-to-kill-hd-radio/

"Congressman Boucher to NAB - Accept Performance Royalty"

"This week, Congressman Rick Boucher, a member of both the House of Representatives Commerce and Judiciary Committees, told an audience of broadcasters at the NAB Leadership Conference that they should accept that there will be a performance royalty for sound recordings used in their over-the-air programming and negotiate with the record companies about the amount of a such a royalty."

LOL, that's funny. Finally. I was beginning to think you wouldn't ever come up with a decent line.

Fact is, in about 15 minutes, I will be going to bed with the GF. I will tell her about your latest ravings, it will amuse her.

The sound of laughter, Telemundoh. That's all.

Your scenario is simply wrong, as you seem to be most of the the time.
You posted some good info about EMPs, but seemed to go right back to the usual nonsense. So sad.

I'm going to be going on some overnight vacations for the next few days, so I will be leaving you pretty much alone, as I will be in and out and won't have time to access usenet too often, so you can whine about something else while I'm gone. Please try to keep to the sane side, for once, I know you can do it!

BTW, Obama was born in Hawaii. It's not in dispute by sane folks, and even most kooktards.

Perhaps if he would stop calling for the failure of the united states while inciting his moronic (literally) followers into a mass murderous psychologically unstable uprisings that has nothing at all to do politics but more to do with the wealthy keeping their money and social status.

Ru$h's consistent highly publicized insane rants leaves little doubt about the intelligence of not only the people who put him in front of the mic but of the people who follow his mantra.

People seem to forget that he is a 1)drug-addled 2)college dropout 3) caught with Viagra on a christain sex cruise. Then, being given over $400m by a mysteriously funded radio network to lead the conservative party.

Who else even comes close in the (cough) media?!

Incredible isn't it. I just shake my head because all the people that ragged Bush (some of it deservingly).....you'll never hear them
utter a word when their Messiah not only does the same thing, after promising not to, but taking it totally to another level.

Should be interesting and exciting either way IMO. ;-)

Warrantless wiretapping is BS, no matter who's doing it or for what reason.
It's too damned easy to get a court order in a matter of hours. It was wrong when Bush did it, it's wrong when Obama does it. We can't be a nation of laws if the leaders can't follow the laws.

I doubt it. This loser we have for a president is so arrogant about the agenda he wants to implement that he can't afford someone to say the chosen one has no clothes on.

This is just another indication what a loser president zero is that he has to attack a talk show host.

His family is a part of who he is and the environment he grew up in.
It's a part of what formed his values same as his brother.

Exactly Brenda Ann. I'll admit, I voted for Bush and I was so dissapointed with his actions shortly after he took office the second time I wished I could have taken back my vote. I feel I was scammed.

This time, I feel everyone that voted for Obama (minus the majority of blacks who would have voted for him even if he said he was going to put down every living dog) were fools/ or fooled. The hatred for Bush and the republican party was so strong that it didn't really matter who the dems put up.

The part that worries me, is that there is now someone who leads this country that is so studied in how to talk and how to change certain body movements and the tone of his voice when giving a speech that the majority of people (even republicans and border line voters) are simply going to allow him to do anything to forward the "agenda" without even a question.

On a small scale but yet something to notice is on the late night shows.....Letterman and Leno. Both of them are so anti republican party and especially Letterman, that they refuse to make fun of him (Obama) or poke at his faux pas but they would spend a whole segment and even parts of their intro at poking at Bush. Obama is untouchable, and he is untouchable (ducking beer bottles) because of the color of his skin and like I said months ago, he will be the last black person that will ever sniff the oval office. The huge question is, will the damage (agenda) that he pushes cause irreparable damage to this country.

The majority of what he said to become elected he has already reneged on and I KNEW IT. :-I

RHF,

In your great rebuke of Obama's bow (made more comical by the right-wing's earlier assault on Michelle Obama for not bowing low enough to the Queen of England!) you, predictably, ignore the ways I listed that GW Bush sucked up far more to the King of Saudi Arabia, for example, using the US Air Force to spirit the royal family out of the US on 9/12/01 or the time Bush invited the Saudi royal family to party with him on his ranch. Why? Why do you ignore the fact that Republicans have repeatedly sucked up to the Saudis more? Do you remember what Reagan did for the Saudis?

I bet you don't provide a specific answer, but why don't you give it a try, RHF?

You're just a Nobamanista! But, you've got over three and a half years, at least, to go. I think we can count on your for entertainment during that time.

You can do better than this, Telamon! Everyone knows that Obama did not grow up in any environment around his brother or even his father.
He didn't meet either until he was virtually an adult. The environment Obama grew up in was in Honolulu with his white grandparents. You know that, but yet you play the spin, spin, spin game.

Just like you. Indict someone for the words he uses while ignoring the wiretaps. But most of you were suggesting that ANYTHING was justified in the fight against terrorism while Georgie-boy was Prez, so your spinning-style of hypocrisy is expected.

Obama’s “Sex Rebel” Communist Mentor

The sexual perversion of Frank Marshall Davis -- the “sex specialist” -- adds a dramatic and alarming element to the controversy over his relationship with Barack Obama. Davis, a member of the Communist Party USA, was the subject of a 19-year FBI investigation and his FBI file, posted on www.usasurvival.org, is 600 pages long. Some information in the file suggests espionage activities on Davis’s part.

Davis was part of the “Toward Soviet America” movement and greatly admired Soviet Russia.

Toby Harnden of the London Daily Telegraph was the first to report that Davis’s sexual proclivities were documented in a 1968 pornographic novel, written just two years before Davis became Obama’s mentor, which was titled, Sex Rebel: Black (Memoirs of a Gash Gourmet). Davis wrote the book under a pseudonym, Bob Greene.

http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=7443

Elements of Green Party's (GP) political platform include the following:

Asserting that “[w]omen's right to control their bodies” is “non-negotiable,” GP maintains that it is “essential that the option of a safe, legal abortion remains available.”

“Contraception and abortion must be included in all health insurance policies in the U.S., and any state government must be able to legally offer these services free of charge to women at the poverty level."

GP calls for "access to free birth control devices, information counseling, and clinics to all who desire them," and the "implementation of family planning education for both genders in all levels of the state school system."

GP exhorts the U.S., "under the agency of the United Nations," to "renew and initiate government funding and support for family planning, contraception, and abortion in all countries that request it."

GP supports "the recognition of equal rights of persons gay, lesbian, bisexual, or transgender to housing, jobs, civil marriage, medical benefits, child custody, and in all areas of life provided to all other citizens." It supports "the inclusion of language in state and federal anti-discrimination law that ensures the rights of intersex individuals [those with neither exclusively male nor female sex organs] and prohibits discrimination based on gender identity, characteristics, and expression." And it supports "access to medical and surgical treatment for assignment or reassignment of gender or sex."

GP calls for the "elimination of displays of religious symbols, monuments, or statements on government buildings, property, websites, money, or documents." In a related matter, it favors the "restoration of the Pledge of Allegiance to its pre-1954 version, eliminating the politically motivated addition of 'under God.'"

GP calls for the "revocation of the Congressional charter of the Boy Scouts of America" -- on grounds that it does not admit gay scout leaders and thus "practices bigotry against certain ... classes of people."

GP seeks to end "school vouchers whereby public money pays for students in religious schools."

GP calls for "creative and noncompetitive education at every age level, and the inclusion of cultural diversity in all curricula."

GP supports "tuition-free [collegiate and vocational] public education."

GP supports "a universal, comprehensive, national single-payer health insurance program as the only solution to the current disastrous for-profit system." Such a program would guarantee "lifetime benefits for everyone," with no loss of coverage for any reason.

GP calls for "day-care service offered at every workplace when feasible, or reasonably near-by when not feasible at the workplace."

GP demands "the establishment of a reduced-hour work week and at least one month of vacation per year for all workers."

“To overcome the effects of over 200 years of racial discrimination” against black Americans, says GP, “people of color in this country have legitimate claims to reparations in the form of monetary compensation ...”

“Law enforcement is placing too much emphasis on drug-related and petty street crimes, and not enough on prosecution of corporate, white collar, and environmental crimes.”

“Police brutality has reached epidemic levels in the United States and we call for effective monitoring of police agencies to eliminate police brutality.”

“Prisons should be the sentence of last resort, reserved for violent criminals. Those convicted of non-violent offenses should be handled by other programs including halfway houses, electronic monitoring, work-furlough, community service and restitution programs.”

“Paroled prisoners should have access to education, drug treatment, psychological treatment, job training, work and housing.”

Prison inmates should be “granted the right to vote,” and “all persons convicted of felonies [should] regain full citizenship rights upon completion of their sentence, including the right to vote and to run for elected office.”

“Prison conditions … should include heat, light, exercise, clothing, nutrition, libraries, possessions, and personal safety. Prisoners are entitled to psychological, drug, and medical treatment, including access to condoms and uninterrupted access to all prescribed medication.”

All prisoners should be encouraged “to have the opportunity to obtain a G.E.D. (high school equivalency diploma) and higher education.”

The death penalty should be abolished.

“Three Strikes” laws should be repealed and replaced with “judicial discretion in sentencing, as opposed to mandatory sentencing.”

There should be "a moratorium on prison construction." The funds saved "should be used for alternatives to incarceration."

“Employers should be encouraged to continue paying … employees’ wages while they serve prison time.”

There should be a “decriminalization of victimless crimes” such as “the possession of small amounts of marijuana.”

The “war on drugs” should be discontinued, with greater emphasis being placed on “drug counseling and treatment.”

Kiss my Ass you DICK!

The U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) has broken apart an international drug smuggling and money laundering ring which links Hezbollah to the Colombian cocaine cartels

CrAcK Head ObaMao Supports FARC - Marxist Drug Cartel in Columbia

October 15, 2008 - The Third McCain-Obama Presidential Debate

MCCAIN: Well, you know, I admire so much Senator Obama's eloquence. And you really have to pay attention to words.
[...]
Now, on the subject of free trade agreements. I am a free trader.
But let me give you another example of a free trade agreement that Senator Obama opposes. Right now, because of previous agreements, some made by President Clinton, the goods and products that we send to [democratic] Colombia, which is OUR LARGEST AGRICULTURAL IMPORTER OF OUR PRODUCTS, is -- there's a billion dollars that we -- our businesses have paid so far in order to get our goods in there.

Because of previous agreements, their goods and products come into our country for free [Tax free - Americans save money]. So Senator Obama, who has never traveled south of our border, opposes the Colombia Free Trade Agreement. The same country that's helping us try to stop the flow of drugs into our country that's killing young Americans.

And also the country that just freed three Americans that will help us create jobs in America because they will be a market for our goods and products without having to pay -- without us having to pay the billions of dollars -- the billion dollars and more that we've already paid.

Free trade with [democratic] Colombia is something that's a no-brainer. But maybe you ought to travel down there and visit them and maybe you could understand it a lot better.

OBAMA: Let me respond. Actually, I UNDERSTAND IT PRETTY WELL. The history in Colombia right now is that [MARXIST] LABOR LEADERS have been targeted for assassination on a fairly consistent basis [see below] and there have not been prosecutions.

And what I have said, because the free trade -- the trade agreement itself DOES HAVE labor and environmental protections, but we have to stand for human rights [for marxists] and we have to make sure that violence isn't being perpetrated against [marxist] workers [What about marxist perpetrators?] who are just trying to organize for their [marxist] rights, which is why, for example, I supported the Peruvian Free Trade Agreement which was a well-structured agreement. [NOTE: The Peruvian FTA was based on the Andean Trade Preference Act. In 1991, under the George H. W. Bush administration, the United States enacted the Andean Trade Preference Act. The program was renewed in 2002 by the George W. Bush administration as the Andean Trade Promotion and Drug Eradication Act. OBAMA did nothing! He is an obfuscator!]

MCCAIN: Well, let me just [say] that... Senator Obama doesn't want a free trade agreement with our best ally in the region but wants to sit down across the table without precondition with [communist dictator] Hugo Chavez [a murderer], the guy who has been helping [marxist] FARC [drug cartell], the terrorist organization.

Free trade between ourselves and [democratic] Colombia, I just recited to you the benefits of concluding that agreement, a billion dollars of American dollars that could have gone to creating jobs and businesses in the United States, opening up those markets.

...I don't think there's any doubt that Senator OBAMA WANTS TO RESTRICT TRADE AND HE WANTS TO RAISE TAXES. And the last president of the United States that tried that was Herbert Hoover, and we went from a deep recession into a depression.

We're not going to follow that path when I'm president of the United States.

In 2003 Colombian President Alvaro Uribe accused Colombian NGOs of “politicking at the service of terrorism.” “Every time a security policy is carried out in Colombia to defeat terrorism, when terrorists start feeling weak, they immediately send their spokesmen to talk about human rights.”

In 2002 over 40 Democrat members of Congress signed a letter to Secretary of State Colin Powell alleging "human rights violations" by the Government of Colombia in its war against the drug-running, marxist guerrilla terrorist Colombian Revolutionary Armed Forces, FARC, established as the military wing of the Colombian Communist Party. This letter, published worldwide and used as pro-FARC anti-

Government of Colombia propaganda, made no mention of marxist FARC's thousands of murders, atrocities and support from Cuban Marxist dictator Fidel Castro and from Venezuela's Marxist caudillo Hugo Chavez. The letter urged Secretary Powell "to take our concerns into account when determining whether to approve additional military aid for Colombia this year."
http://www.ciponline.org/colombia/02072301.htm

The daring rescue this past summer of French-Colombian politician Ingrid Betancourt and 14 other hostages (including three Americans) by Colombian commandos is cause for rejoicing. As Colombian President Alvaro Uribe put it, the rescue mission was "an unbelievable military achievement." It marked yet another huge victory for Colombia in its war on terrorism and another embarrassing defeat for the country's main leftist guerrilla group--known by its Spanish acronym, FARC--which had been holding Betancourt since 2002.

During the six years of her captivity, Colombia was transformed. Murders, kidnappings, and terrorist attacks have all plunged dramatically. The FARC has been devastated by combat deaths and desertions; its remaining forces inhabit remote camps deep in the Colombian jungle, far away from the urban areas. As a result, foreign investment is pouring into the biggest cities. The World Bank has lauded Colombia for its economic reforms, which helped GDP grow by 6.8 percent in 2006 and by more than 7 percent in 2007.

When we consider the progress made under President Uribe (who was first elected in 2002), it is appalling that the U.S. Congress has refused to approve a free trade agreement (FTA) with Colombia, ostensibly due to concerns over violence. By any serious measure, Colombia is a far less violent place today than at any time in recent years. Democratic House leaders argue that Colombia has not done enough to stop attacks on trade unionists. That depends on the meaning of the word "enough": According to official Colombian statistics, murders of trade unionists declined from 196 in 2002 to 26 in 2007. Uribe established a special government-funded program to protect union members from violence, and there is no question that their safety has increased enormously.

Unfortunately, American labor unions--a bulwark of the Democratic party--are strongly opposed to the free trade pact. (Never mind that the Free Trade Agreement would mostly benefit U.S. farmers and exporters.) If the deal has any chance of winning congressional approval, it will happen after the 2008 election.

Like most Democrats, Barack Obama has come out against the Colombia Free Trade Agreement and has chastised the Uribe administration for not doing more to reduce violence. Though Obama speaks often of his desire to improve U.S. credibility abroad, the Democrats' treatment of Colombia is having precisely the opposite effect. Uribe is our closest ally in Latin America. If Congress is willing to humiliate him, what message does that send to other countries in the region?

If Obama saw the results on the ground in Colombia, he would be less inclined to denounce Uribe over human rights. John McCain was in Colombia last summer (the same week Betancourt was rescued).

Since 2000, the United States has spent billions of dollars on "Plan Colombia," an aid package designed to help Colombia stamp out narcotics trafficking. Though it was expanded by President Bush, Plan Colombia began as a Clinton administration initiative that enjoyed strong bipartisan backing in Congress. In other words, close cooperation with Bogotá is not a "Bush policy."

Colombia is located in a region where Communist Venezuelan leader Hugo Chávez is trying to spread radical populism. Americans should affirm their support for a robust U.S.-Colombia partnership--even if it angers some prominent socialist Democrats, Liberal Fascist Neo-Communists and the marxist AFL-CIO crowd.

In other words, ObaMao does not give a damn about working Americans. NO! The only thing he cares about are his marxist comrades in the Communist Party International:

Recovered Emails Detail the FARC's International Support

Email messages linking the Colombian Marxist guerilla insurgency (known by its Spanish acronym, FARC) to POLITICIANS, UNION ACTIVISTS AND LEFT-WING POLITICAL PARTIES IN NORTH AMERICA have revealed a network of supporters spanning several continents, and have kept tensions high between Colombia and some of its neighbors.

http://www.worldpoliticsreview.com/article.aspx?id=2742

ObaMao doesn't want to save no stinkin' white ass blue collar union workers. HELL NO! He wants to save the MARXIST MURDERERS who run the Communist Unions and who have ties with the drug cartel, the Columbian Marxist FARC, who are running cocaine into the noses of your sons and daughters.

In his own words ObaMao admits to being a CrAcKhEaD!

In the early days of the War on Terror, back when the United States was only fighting one war, in Afghanistan, Deputy Secretary of State Richard Armitage made a bold statement: “Hezbollah may be the ‘A-Team of terrorists,’” Armitage said, referring to the Lebanese-based, Iranian-controlled organization, “and maybe al-Qaeda is actually the ‘B’-Team.”

http://www.cbsnews.com/stories/2003/04/18/60minutes/main550000.shtml

Hezbollah has certainly been killing Americans for longer than al-Qaeda has — beginning in 1983 with the truck bombing of the Marine barracks in Beirut which killed 241 Marines. As recently as June 2006, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State David Satterfield told reporters that Hezbollah teams were involved in attacking U.S.-led coalition forces in Iraq.

http://www.washingtoninstitute.org/templateC05.php?CID=2716

Now, in an alarming new development, the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) has broken apart an international drug smuggling and money laundering ring which links Hezbollah to the Colombian cocaine cartels though a Lebanese operative named Shukri Mahmud Harb.

http://www.jamestown.org/terrorism/news/article.php?articleid=2374525

This is the first time the U.S. has tied a terrorist organization to a major cocaine cartel. “The profits from the sale of drugs went to finance Hezbollah,” says Gladys Sanchez, the chief investigator for the special prosecutor’s office in Bogotá. The DEA took the lead on the investigation, which went by the code name Operation Titan.

According to documents unsealed by a federal magistrate in Miami last week, Harb, who lived in Bogotá and went by the alias “Taliban,” acted as the money man between the cocaine cartels and the terror organization. Described as a “world-class money-launderer,” Harb’s illegal financial transactions have spanned the globe — from Latin America to Asia — with a cut being diverted to fund terror.

http://www.miamiherald.com/news/southflorida/story/762200.html

“Harb traveled frequently to Syria, Egypt, and Lebanon, and his arrest occurred when he was about to leave Bogotá for Syria,” the Miami Herald reported last weekend. Also arrested in Operation Titan were 21 individuals in Colombia and “90 others in Panama, Guatemala, Lebanon, Hong Kong, and the United States.” According to the Colombian special prosecutor’s office, investigators analyzed more than 700,000 intercepted phone conversations from 370 tapped cell phone lines. Two other Middle Eastern men were also charged — a Jordanian named Ali Mohamad Abdul Rahim and a second Lebanese national named Zacaria Hussein Harb.

http://www.miamiherald.com/news/southflorida/story/762200.html

This new partnership will no doubt raise complications for President-elect Barack Obama in his proposed plans to open diplomatic talks with Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad. “Hezbollah in Lebanon is a proxy of Iran,” says former Middle East CIA operative Robert Baer http://www.npr.org/templates/story/story.php?storyId=95285396 in his new book, The Devil We Know. “It follows to the letter Iranian orders.”

http://www.amazon.com/Devil-We-Know-Dealing-Superpower/dp/0307408647

This means that Iran is co-sponsoring Hezbollah along with the only global organization able to consistently smuggle tons of illegal goods into every single industrialized nation in the world including America — on a daily basis. Toss the Colombian cocaine cartels’ newest mode of transport into the mix — stealthy semi-submersible submarines, or “drug subs” — and the national security ramifications in the Iran-Hezbollah-Colombia cocaine cartel triumvirate grow exponentially.

...these drug subs are built in the “FARC-controlled jungles of Colombia” and have rapidly become a dangerous and “highly effective asymmetrical vehicle of conveyance.” As the war on drugs and the war on terror begin to increasingly overlap...

http://pajamasmedia.com/blog/drug-subs-david-and-goliath-on-the-high-seas/

Which is exactly what the terrorists — ‘A’-Team and ‘B’-Team members alike — already know.

Maybe B HO's brother has HIV and he wanted to get rid of it and pass it on to that 13 year old girl in England.

I knew there is a little concrete drainage ditch near my back door.I got my shovel and my HO (garden Hoe, that is) and I started digging.HUP, don't think twice, I found it! Soon as I get done with my twenty/thirty minutes coffee and cig break, it's back to the future in my back yard for me.It going to rain and I really do need to clean out that ditch.

family and with the values that family promoted. Barry decided to become a lying politician in just about the most politically corrupt place in the nation and associate with terrorists and religious nut cases. Bernard decided to become a sex offender. Other members of his esteemed family decided to break our visa laws. A criminal family if I ever saw one. I'm sure there are more law breakers in the family we don't yet know about but that will come out in time.

The obomination is an equal opportunity lying politician. He has already broke his promises to the left leaning socialist zombies that voted for him and the right already hates him. Looks like impeach the obomination in 2010.

There, is that better? You are welcome.

Radio New Zealand was on the wrong frequency today durning UTC hour 18:00 and abruptly went off a little before 19:00.

UTC 17:51 to 18:50 they are supposed to be on 6170 AM, which does not make here this time of day.

If you are not getting them when you should it might pay to check their other frequencies.

No problem but some people will not want to see it so just start the

It's about time we kicked some pirate butt. Now lets go free those other

I suppose we should be thankful the obominator allowed the US Navy to do its job. It's a start. Maybe tomorrow he will stop burying our future under a mountain of debt. In any event I'm sure he will find the time to thank himself for it.

Speaking for myself I find the obominator and his wife supremely embarrassing. Neither should be bowing before the Kings and Queens of any nation. We are not their subjects.

There are two reasons other nations like the obominator being president of the USA, one because he is liberal with a political philosophy closer to the socialistic governments of europe and the other is they think he is a pushover.

Capt. Richard Phillips - safe According to first reports, Capt. Richard Phillips jumped into the water for the second time from the lifeboat on which four Somali pirates had been holding him for four days. This time he made it to safety – possibly helped by US frogmen - giving the opening for the US Navy to attack the AK-47-assault gun-toting pirates who held him.
Three were killed and one taken into custody. The captain was held after his ship the Maersk Alabama and crew was briefly commandeered.
The rescue took place as the lifeboat was nearing the Somali coast where Phillips could have been made to disappear. He is now unhurt aboard the USS Bainbridge nuclear guided-missile cruiser.

Reports are that Obama (HNC), gave the order to use military to rescue the hostage.

In my opinion, the HNC is not intelligent enough to figure out how to give a proper order. Yes, he might strut and primp as a pompous pimp, but give an order... give me a break.

Dr.DaviD, PhD (Piled higher & Deeper) is a new generation of “Useful Idiots,” http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Useful_idiot that Lenin identified as those who lived in liberal democracies and furthered the work of communism. This new generation of Useful Idiots also lives in liberal democracies but serves the cause of Islamofascism —another virulent form of totalitarian ideology.

Useful Idiots are naïve, foolish, ignorant of facts, unrealistically idealistic, dreamers, willfully in denial or deceptive. They hail from the ranks of the chronically unhappy, the anarchists, the aspiring revolutionaries, the neurotics who are at war with life, the disaffected alienated from government, corporations, and just about any and all institutions of society. The Useful Idiot can be a billionaire, a movie star, an academe of renown, a politician, or from any other segment of the population.

Arguably, the most dangerous Useful Idiot is the “Politically Correct.” He is the master practitioner of euphemism, hedging, doubletalk, and outright deception.

The Useful Idiot derives satisfaction from being anti-establishment. He finds perverse gratification in aiding the forces that aim to dismantle an existing order, whatever it may be: an order he neither approves of nor he feels he belongs to.

The Useful Idiot is conflicted and dishonest. He fails to look inside himself and discover the causes of his own problems and unhappiness while he readily enlists himself in causes that validate his distorted perception.

Understandably, it is easier to blame others and the outside world than to examine oneself with an eye to self-discovery and self-improvement. Furthermore, criticizing and complaining—liberal practices of the Useful Idiot—require little talent and energy. The Useful Idiot is a great armchair philosopher and “Monday Morning Quarterback.”

The Useful Idiot is not the same as a person who honestly has a different point of view. A society without honest and open differences of views is a dead society. Critical, different and fresh ideas are the life blood of a living society—the very anathema of autocracies where the official position is sacrosanct.

Even the “normal” spends a great deal more energy aiming to fix things out there than working to overcome his own flaws and shortcomings, or contribute positively to the larger society. People don’t like to take stock of what they are doing or not doing that is responsible for the conditions they disapprove.

The Useful Idiot, among other things, is a master practitioner of scapegoating. He assigns blame to others while absolving himself of responsibility, has a long handy list of candidates for blaming anything and everything, and by living a distorted life, he contributes to the ills of society.

The Useful Idiot may even engage in willful misinformation and deception when it suits him.

The lesson is clear. Beware of the Useful Idiots who live in liberal democracies. Knowingly or unknowingly, they serve as the greatest volunteer and effective soldiers of Islam. They pave the way for the advancement of Islam and they will assuredly be among the very first victims of Islam as soon as it assumes power.

Why, they say such things as above as if they have any credibility.

EMP can be produced with a charge to push a permanent magnet through the field of an electromagnetic coil of opposite polarity. I think this was reviewed by the Australian defense consultant Carlo Kopp, I'll look for the site. It's also been found to occur when permanent magnets are shattered by explosives. In fact, DOD is looking into adding an EMP component to ordnance as small as individual cluster bombs.

Lucky you are as f'd up as the original poster with his nonsense

Obama has been a great disappointment so far and has shown himself to be just another lying politician

He said he would decriminalize pot and make drug offenses less onerous but since he has been in office he has stated he would NEVER do such a thing and is out to stamp out legal MJ with his policies

Also
He said he would not support more bailing out of bs institutions but then went right along with wall st bankers and did so

He also is against working people's right to form unions and has already said he would stretch out our stay in IRAQ as well as pour many more thousands of soldiers into the Afghanistan war

He stated before election he would stand up for Armenians in Turkey and not kowtow to the Arabs
So far he has lied on both accounts

This president is nothing but a tedious cunt like lucky/damnutty

That is just a great story. After watching those "Sniper Schools" shows on tv, you have to really hand it to those shooters. Total team effort and FINALLY a victory for the US and a warning to those types of activities that it won't be tolerated. My boy finally got back home from training and he gave me a super looking black army hat :-) I will wear it with pride.

Far from it. Thorton said he loved playing here. Rumour has it that Willy Nelson told him to pack it up. He doesn't want a prick and the associated bad publicity following him along.

I like Willy Nelson. Jennings was also good.

Note that SOME people don't even know how to spell the juvenile

I love it - In my area several stations that were transmitting ibiquity digital junk have turned it off but they continue to have spots proclaiming “now in crystal clear HD”. Thus leading consumers to believe that they are hearing their radio station in “crystal clear HD” – with no hd radio upgrade needed!

Talk about confusion! Good way to promote a product – let them think they already have it! Struble you’re a genius.

Oh yea – hd radio is exciting! No need to buy one (if they were even available) because you already have one!

The G5 is like new with all accessories .

The DX-398 has been in my possession for several years and is excellent condition .

Someone in this group (do not recall the name) did some mods on these radios, including mine.
The mods improved SW/FM sensitivity and the AM Gain feature .
The kick stand had to be replaced and , since RS did not store them ,
I had to use the Sangean version, which comes in a lighter gray.
It comes with a "SANGEAN" Soft carrying case and an SANGEAN AC
adapter. No Box.

$ 110 for the G5 and $ 150.00 for the DX-398. These prices include shipping.

Will take back the radios, within 3 days of delivery, provided that buyer covers shipping cost.

My rating on eBay and Amazon is 100% .

Thank you for looking!

The Alliance and their radio partners are to blame for the lack of or piss poor marketing!
When buying a new car if you ask the sales person about digital radio, they'll sell you Satellite radio?
When HD units start coming standard in new cars is when the rubber will hit the road.. consumers won't understand why the receiver flip flops between analog & digital.
Enough blame can go around for everyone!

Space Weather News for April 13, 2009
http://spaceweather.com

RADIO STORMS ON JUPITER: On April 11th, an amateur radio astronomer in New Mexico heard loud pops and crackles coming from the loudspeaker of his shortwave receiver. The sounds resembled terrestrial lightning, but the source was not on Earth. It was a radio storm on Jupiter. You can listen to the sounds on today's edition of http://spaceweather.com .

Astronomers have long known that Jupiter produces strong shortwave radio bursts detectable from Earth; the fact of Jupiter's "radio activity" is not news. However, now may be the best time in decades to listen to the giant planet. The sun is in the pits of a century-level solar minimum. Low solar activity increases the transparency of Earth's atmosphere to shortwave radio waves, allowing signals from Jupiter to more easily and clearly reach the ground. At the same time, terrestrial radio interference subsides (another side-effect of solar minimum), so Jupiter bursts are easier to identify.

2009 is going to be a good year for Jupiter. The planet is moving away from the sun and may now be seen shining brightly in the eastern sky before dawn. Students, teachers and amateur scientists who wish to try listening as well as watching should consider building their own radio telescope. Kits are available from NASA's Radio JOVE program: http://radiojove.gsfc.nasa.gov/

an annoying wubba-wubba sound whenever one of their sidebands fades a little (which is several times a minute).

"HD radio breaks up!"

"I know this has been around the block before. I would like to here from any members particularly in the Seattle area that have HD radio and what their likes and dislikes are. I have had the same problem ever since I took delivery with the HD cutting out. Mine will cut in and out at a traffic light. I live 6 miles from work and the HD will cut out 2-10 times during my commute. I have taken it to the dealer last week and they replaced the tail light sockets. Their take on it was there was an magnetic interferance issue with the antenna system causing the HD to cut in and out. This has not fixed the problem but they say the antenna signal strength is higher now. I can't say if it's the car radio or that HD is not as strong as signal and this is just the way it is. This problem exists with all HD channels. I would hate to see the dealer keep my car for an extended period of time when in fact there is nothing wrong. I am in south Seattle."

"I am having a problem with my HD Radio. I have iDrive, so I see everything on the big screen. My radio is set to be in HD mode all the time, but it switches to analog on occasion. On one of my preset stations, when it is in HD mode, the station will play for two seconds and then it will fade out and not come back. If it is in analog mode, the station will play without fading out... I went to the service department yesterday and the SA told me that it may be weather-related. We have been having some crazy weather here in Southern California. I first noticed these problems during the bad weather -- but it seems like it may be something more than weather issues."

"I have started to experience a problem with my HD Radio and was wondering if I'm alone, or if any of my fellow 'festers have ideas. Every once in a while (and now, all too often), my Radio will 'buzz' whenever a station is tuned. The buzzing will quickly become louder than the radio content. I can stop this phenomenon by during the HD Radio 'off', in the Audio Settings. After turning the car off, and back on this will ususally go away. Today it didn't (go away). I love the sound of the HD Radio. However, this is becoming unacceptable."

"Want to Kill HD Radio?"

"Let’s say that radio companies have to start paying royalties on the music that they play. Even if it is a flat percentage of all revenue like other outlets are going to be charged, HD Radio streams would do nothing more than serve to drive up royalty payments for NAB members. The overwhelming majority of terrestrial listeners ARE NOT listening to HD Radio. Ads on HD Radio will be dirt cheap for a very long time. The HD streams may not be able to cover royalty on music from ad revenues. Do you think that Clear Channel will continue to pump money in to HD Radio equipment, expanding services and coverage if the payoff in the end is an INCREASE in copyright royalties and nothing more?"

Yeah BHO is getting a little "Over Exposed" in the Media.

- Some people say BHO's mom wasen't married

- pregnant with BHO.
Barack 'Hussein' Obama's Parents were in-fact
Not 'legally' Married; since BHO's Father had a 'Legal' Muslim Wife and 'Legal' Children back in Kenya under Sharia Law and Kenyan Civil Law.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Sharia
At best Obama's Mother could be categorized as a Non-Muslim* "Infidel Concubine"; plus BHO's Father would have to take the necessary steps to 'Legalize' BHO under Sharia Law.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Obama#Early_life_and_career
* BHO's Mother did not convert to Islam and they were not Married as prescribed by Sharia Law.
By the time BHO was two years old BHO's Father and left BHO and the Mother {Abandoned Them} and moved on with his life to continue the Father's Education in the Mainland USA and Return to Kenya to Work in the Government. BHO's Father also returned to his 'Legal' Muslim Wife and had more 'Legal' Children by her.
The first-half of BHO's Childhood is a Story of Abandonment
1st BHO's Father Abandoned Him to Pursue His Education
2st BHO's Step-Father Abandoned Him
3st BHO's Mother Abandoned Him to Pursue Her Education http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Obama
NOTE - BHO's book "Dreams from My Father" is a classic example of Over-Compensating for BHO's sense of Abandonment by BHO's Father at a very young age.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dreams_from_My_Father
* The Need to Be Liked and Accepted and Not to be Rejected {Abandoned}

BHO's second-half of his childhood is a story of being Raise by BHO's White {Mid-Western} Grandparents in the State of Hawaii and Going to an Elite Private School.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Obama
NOTE - Rejecting His Half-White Privileged Upbringing and taking on the 'Persona' of an African-American.
* Some would call it "Transformational" and others would label it as 'Self-Hate'.
Collectively these early life experiences are the Corner-Stone "Foundation" of Barack 'Hussein' Obama's Nature and Character as American's First "Black" {African-American} US President.
like 'bho' or not - that's who he is ~ RHF
- Some people say BHO is not an American Citizen.
- I Believe BHO is NOT an American Citizen.
There is sufficient 'Legal' Evidence {Public Documents} to reasonably demonstrate that Barack 'Hussein' Obama was Born in the US State of Hawaii in 1961.
1 - Making BHO a "Natural Born Citizen of the United States" http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Natural_born_citizen_of_the_United_States
2 - Making BHO Age 48 which is at least 35 Years Old 3 - BHO has been a Permanent Resident in the United States for at least 14 Years.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/President_of_the_United_States
NOTE A - The Fact that BHO's Parents were NOT 'Legally' Married is NOT a Factor in His Legal Qualifications to be the US President.
NOTE B - The Fact that BHO's Father was NOT a US Citizen is NOT a Factor in His Legal Qualifications to be the US President.
FWIW - There is No Evidence that BHO's Mother had a US Passport in 1961.
PLUS - There is No Evidence that BHO's Mother did Travel to Kenya in 1961 to give Birth to BHO in Kenya.

I have an XP setup at work. That provides all the entertainment I can handle. A few more intrusions / crashes and they'll start leaning more towards a Linux (Open Source) based operation.

An acquaintance has recently pulled Vista from his machine and went back to XP. Vista is as bad as Windows ME.

They don't anymore, there is Linux and other systems. I run the updated version of IBM/OS/2(eCS) and have no problems running any program that allows me to use the web, etc. Too many people just accept what is loaded on their computer without thinking about the alternatives.

dxAce,
Just wondering how you get such great dx, saw your setup in an old photo, are you close to Lake Michigan? I am on the ocean in South Florida and run a long wire to a Hammarlund HQ-145XC and have yet to snag any MW European DX. I know that you run high-end Drake equipment, but any advice would be helpful.

You are too far south to get that kind of DX, Bet you get other kinds that would scare the hell out of a Michigan dweller. Ooooooohhh, that's scary kids!

Why would I be too far south for European MW? I am less than one mile from the Atlantic, and should get good signals, but too damn many 3-D

Oh really? That's a good story, I'll ask him if he knows about that or not. I told him I didn't want a camo or anything because I'm not serving now and I left it up to him.

When he told me what the hat looked like he said "these are the baddest looking hats." When he gave it to me I about crapped, definitely an eye catcher and I could see where one branch would be ticked, especially with a design like that. Sharpest hat I ever owned, now I can retire my Navy hat, which is sharp also, but not like this one. Thanks for the heads up B.A.

I was just reading your post again, are we talking about the same thing? This is a baseball type hat. It is black and in an embroidered white on the bill it says "U.S.Army." At the top of the hat it says the same thing and below it in gray - the Eagle with the arrows in the left talons and on one quarter of the side of the hat on the right in a darker hue of gray is that same eagle only bigger. Then it has the white US Army on the velcro part that is adjustable which is cool because usually I have to cut that part off because I have an extremely big head...but it fit perfectly.

Yes, the original A09 skeds WERE posted at the EiBi site on the 7th, as I posted here at 1:52 PM ET (1752 UT). They were 80% completed at the time, dufus.

Not blank here! However, on the 7th, and until the 12th, it was I think 4 red bars across, but, had you clicked one of the sked links, it would have brought up the A09 sked, dumbass.

No matter, I've gone back and retrieved Eike's post to DXLD on 7 April at 10:15 AM ET.
(it's message #36513 if you care to look it up yourself)

Read it, dufus:

Glenn, and others,

the schedules are not completed yet, essentially CRI, most of VoR, and Radio Australia still missing. Looking for these schedules! Anybody?

However, I put the preliminary and INCOMPLETE version online: Sorted by frequency:
http://www.eibispace.de/dx/freq-a09.txt Sorted by UTC:
http://www.eibispace.de/dx/bc-a09.txt

Perseus users can copy this file in the Perseus directory:
http://www.eibispace.de/dx/eibi.txt

I know it's incomplete, but that what IS in there, should be fine to my best knowledge, otherwise PLEASE LET ME KNOW :)

And WWRB 3145 closed down at 0400 UTC, along with 5050 and 5745.

Yup, for once Steve is actually right! GWB never bowed to the Saudi King. He was too busy holding The Sheik's hand and kissing him.

Furthermore, Bush's kissing and hand-holding of The Sheik makes Obama's

For those who may not remember who 'Gannon' is, here is "the rest of the story":

Jeff Gannon (real name Guckert) = the male prostitute that had the run of the Bush/Cheney White House.

I'm guessing the N stands for "near", as in "the new sheriff is near".

$150.00 for the 398, not a bad price at all with the mods. I don't recall anyone in this group doing the mods. I know Radio Labs does them, Chris Justice did mine, I don't know if he is still there or not.

Just thought that you might be getting the "ocean" effect of signals coming over huge bodies of water instead of land. John Plimmer said that with my location, I should be getting some good DX, but there are so damn many locals at night here in Florida, it is hard for foreign stations to break through!

Bob, it's not the "ocean" effect, it's the "sea gain" effect and it operates only on MW mediumwave. It does this over the salt sea water - it is not clear if it works over freshwater like dxAce's lake Michigan.

Sea gain does not seem to work for SW, only MW. It was first discovered and written up in scientific papers by British BBC engineers 60 years ago.

Bob I'm sorry you don't get any TA reception on MW = you should, even on your Redsun RP2100 if you take it down to the beach one evening at sunset. Give it a try.

Still at it. eh? When the site showed the Apr. 12th update, it did not show a previous update in the "previous" line. So I thought the Apr.
12th post was the latest, But no, not being able to figure that out,

Mike,
Speaking of Ubuntu, downloaded the 8.10 version, installed it and could not, for any reason, get the Network Manager to connect me to my DHCP router. I heard that this is a problem. Everything else looked nice, but no internet connectivity! I went on the Linux forums and this is a problem that they say is being fixed in the 9.04 release. I have a separate NIC card, no onboard, and old 3Com, it shows up, but no go. What did you do to connect?

I don't know. It just works. I'm using a separate card too. The connectivity was there when I was installing 8.10

First I checked the menu in 'System' "preferences' 'Network Connection'.
The 'wired' option has the Auto ETH0 setting.

Editing that shows you the 'Wired' tab. You MAC address should show up.
That is the address of your network card. I have the 'system setting' checked here ONLY.

Under the 802.1 tab, there is nothing checked.
Under the IP4 Settings tab, only the Automatic (DHCP) is selected.

Under 'System' 'Preferences' 'Network Proxy', I have "direct internet connection' checked off.

Was the Card connected to a modem at the time of installation?

I'd try a re-installation.

Try unpowering the modem for half a minute so that it has to get a lease from the provider. That sometimes resets the DHCP numbers in the machine.

Installing 'Firestarter' and resetting the firewall rules may also help.
Firestarter is meant for mere mortals and sets the firewall rules in an understandable fashion.

These sites will be of more help than I have been.

Retire wasn't the proper word, I know what you are saying. If it helps

Earlier, Obama visited a landmark mosque in Istanbul, following strong messages of US reconciliation with the Islamic world on his maiden trip to a mainly Muslim country as president.

Taking off his shoes as tradition requires, Obama stepped into the 17th-century Sultanahmet Mosque in the ancient heart of Istanbul, accompanied by Turkish Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan.

Two Muslim preachers guided Obama inside the grandiose edifice -- better known as the Blue Mosque for its blue tileworks -- and the president smiled
when they showed him a dome scripture mentioning the Prophet Mohammed's
grandson Hussein, Obama's middle name, Anatolia news agency reported.

In a major speech at the Turkish parliament in Ankara Monday, Obama declared that the United States "is not and never will be at war with Islam."

"Something of Historic Proportion is Happening"
by Pam Geller

I am a student of history. Professionally. I have written 15 books in six languages, and have studied it all my life. I think there is something monumentally large afoot, and I do not believe it is just a banking crisis,
or a mortgage crisis, or a credit crisis. Yes, these exist but they are merely single facets on a very large gemstone that is only now coming into a sharper focus.

Something of historic proportions is happening. I can sense it because I know
how it feels, smells, what it looks like, and how people react to it.

Yes, a perfect storm may be brewing, but there is something happening within our country that has been evolving for about 10 - 15 years. The pace has dramatically quickened in the past two.

We demand and then codify into law the requirement that our banks make massive loans to people whom we know can never pay back. (Carter/Clinton -
The Community Reinvestment Act) Why?

We learn just days ago that the Federal Reserve, which has little or no real oversight by anyone, has "loaned" two trillion dollars (that is $2,000,000,000,000) over the past few months, but will not tell us to whom or

why or disclose the terms. That is our money. Yours and mine. And that is three times the $700 billion we all argued about so strenuously just this past September.

Who has this money? Why do they have it? Why are the terms unavailable to us? Who asked for it? Who authorized it? I thought this was a government of "We the People," who lent our powers to our elected leaders.. Apparently not.

We have spent two or more decades intentionally de-industrializing our economy. Why? We have intentionally dumbed down our schools, ignored our history, and no longer teach our founding documents, why we are exceptional, and why we are worth preserving. Students by and large cannot write, think critically, read, or articulate. Parents are not revolting, teachers are not picketing, and school boards continue to back mediocrity. Why?

We have now established the precedent of protesting every close election (now violently in California over a proposition that is so controversial that it wants marriage to remain between one man and one woman. Did you ever think such a thing possible just a decade ago?). We have corrupted our sacred political process by allowing unelected judges to write laws that radically change our way of life, and then mainstream Marxist groups like ACORN and others to turn our voting system into a banana republic. To what purpose?

Now our mortgage industry is collapsing, housing prices are in free fall, major industries are failing, our banking system is on the verge of collapse, Social Security is nearly bankrupt, as is Medicare and our entire government. Our education system is worse than a joke (I teach college and know precisely what I am talking about.) The list is staggering in its length, breadth, and depth. It is potentially 1929 x 10. And we are at war with an enemy we cannot name for fear of offending people of the same religion who cannot wait to slit the throats of your children if they have the opportunity to do so.

And now we have elected a man no one knows anything about, who has never run so much as a Dairy Queen, let alone a town as big as Wasilla , Alaska . All of his associations and alliances are with real radicals in their chosen fields of employment, and everything we learn about him, drip by drip, is unsettling if not downright scary (Surely you have heard him speak about his idea to create and fund a mandatory civilian defense force stronger than our military for use inside our borders? No? Oh, of course. The media would never play that for you over and over and then demand he answer it. Sarah Palin's pregnant daughter and $150,000 wardrobe is more important.)

Mr. Obama's winning platform can be boiled down to one word: Change. Why?

I have never been so afraid for my country and for my children as I am now. This man campaigned on bringing people together, something he has never, ever done in his professional life. In my assessment, Obama will divide us along philosophical lines, push us apart, and then try to realign the pieces into a new and different power structure. Change is indeed coming. And when it comes,

you will never see the same nation again.

And that is only the beginning.

I thought I would never be able to experience what the ordinary, moral German felt in the mid-1930's. In those times, the savior was a former smooth-talking rabble-rouser from the streets, about whom the average German knew next to nothing. What they did know was that he was associated with groups that shouted, shoved, and pushed around people with whom they disagreed; he edged his way onto the political stage through great oratory and promises.
Economic
times were tough, people were losing jobs, and he was a great speaker.
And he smiled and waved a lot. And people, even newspapers, were afraid to speak
for fear that his "brown shirts" would bully them into submission.

And then he was duly elected to office, with a full-throttled economic crisis
at hand [the Great Depression]. Slowly but surely he seized the controls of government power, department by department, person by person, bureaucracy by bureaucracy. The kids joined a Youth Movement in his name, where they were taught what to think.

How did he get the people on his side? He did it promising jobs to the jobless, money to the moneyless, and goodies for the military-industrial complex. He did

it by indoctrinating the children, advocating gun control, health care for all, better wages, better jobs, and promising to re-instill pride once again in the country, across Europe , and across the world.

He did it with a compliant media - Did you know that? And he did this all in the name of justice and .. . . change. And the people surely got what they voted for. (Look it up if you think I am exaggerating.) Read your history books. Many people objected in 1933 and were shouted down, called names, laughed at, and made fun of. When Winston Churchill pointed out the obvious in the late 1930's while seated in the House of Lords in England (he was not yet Prime Minister), he was booed into his seat and called a crazy troublemaker. He was right, though.

Don't forget that Germany was the most educated, cultured country in Europe. It was full of music, art, museums, hospitals, laboratories, and universities. And in less than six years - a shorter time span than just two terms of the U. S. presidency - it was rounding up its own citizens, killing others, abrogating its laws, turning children against parents, and neighbors against neighbors. All with the best of intentions, of course. The road to Hell is paved with them.

As a practical thinker, one not overly prone to emotional decisions, I have a choice: I can either believe what the objective pieces of evidence tell me (even if they make me cringe with disgust); I can believe what history is shouting to me from across the chasm of seven decades; or I can hope I am wrong, close my eyes, have another latte and ignore what is transpiring around me.

Some people scoff at me; others laugh or think I am foolish, naive, or both.
Perhaps I am. But I have never been afraid to look people in the eye and tell them exactly what I believe - and why I believe it. I pray I am wrong. I do not think I am.

"Democracy is two wolves and a lamb deciding what to have for dinner.

We're not at war with Islam. We're at "war" with a bunch of extremist assholes that just happen to claim Islam as their raison d'etre. We have plenty of our own, some claim to be Christian, some don't claim any affiliation other than the brotherhood of assholes.

I wouldn't be surprised if he was that kind of guy.

We had one in the neighborhood I grew up in, one day my dog got loose, and he started chasing my dog around with a pitchfork! I ended up taking the pitchfork away from him and explaining to him that if he did anything to my dog, it would be bad for his health. He called the cops, who told me he was famous for that kind of shit, and they warned him to call them, or animal control, but not to do anything to the dog, or they would arrest him, after I got through with him. I was only 14 or 15, but was about 8" taller than him and probably weighed twice what he did, so he never did anything again.

We presently have a local old coot who accuses people of not picking up after their dog when they crap on his lawn. One day about 5 years ago, I walked past his house, and my dog pissed on this rock he has with his street number on it, and we moved on. About 10 minutes later, he comes flying up in his car, and starts screaming at me, "Your dog crapped on my lawn!". I said, "No, he hasn't crapped yet on this walk!" He kept on raving, so I said, "OK, let's see this pile he supposedly left!", and I started walking back to his house. In the front yard was a HUGE pile, both in amount, and more importantly, DIAMETER, and I just laughed. He got all wound up and I finally just had to ask, "If you think that pile came out of this dog, you're obviously senile!". He called me all kinds of names and went into the house. Eventually, the "crapping" became an obsession with him, and he pushed me too far one day when he pulled up in his car, and I flung the nice hot bag into his car, and he called the cops, who took my side, pissing him off even further. He followed me home one day, and the calls started. The guy's wife kept telling him he was taking it too far, but he didn't listen, and finally the cops told him to stop the insanity, or they would arrest him. Him showing the cops a giant pile, and claiming my dog produced it didn't help his case, as he made the cops crack up, and say, "You've got to be kidding, that pile came out of a 100 pound dog, minimum!" He accused the cops of being in "cahoots" with me, in a plot to crap on his lawn. He conveniently ignored the 100 pound dogs living across the street from him, and a couple doors down in each direction, thinking my 50 pound dog was the culprit. The cops told him, if he agreed to pay for it, they would run a DNA test on my dog to prove or disprove his claims. If my dog was the one, I would pay for it. He wouldn't do it, because the cops "were in cahoots" with me, so the test would be negative.

Of course. Now, he accuses another neighbor, with an even smaller dog!

Telemundoh strikes me as the same kind of guy.

US History Encyclopedia: Boston Tea Party Top
Home > Library > History, Politics & Society > US History Encyclopedia

The British East India Company, facing severe financial reverses, convinced Parliament to allow them to sell tea in the American colonies at a price that would undercut even smuggled Dutch tea, and raise revenue while clearing their warehouses of a huge surplus. Unfortunately, this tea would still carry the despised three-pence per pound tax, which had remained as a token duty, and would be sold through only a handful of dealers in America. This high-handed policy united small merchants, left out of the deal, with patriot organizations that protested the tax. The arrival of the tea ships Eleanor, Dartmouth and Beaver sparked public protest in Boston, including public meetings, fliers and harassment of the consignees, who took shelter in Castle William to avoid the crowds.

The Sons of Liberty, led by Samuel Adams, decided on 13 December 1773 that the tea must not be unloaded, nor could it remain onboard twenty days and thus be seized for sale by customs officials. On 16 December, the night the Sons of Liberty planned their raid, a public protest at the Old South Meeting House turned rowdy after someone suggested dumping the tea in the harbor. As protesters stormed out of the meeting house, they met Sons of Liberty, costumed as Narragansett Indians, on their way to do the same thing. With a crowd of perhaps 1,000 Bostonians following, the "Indians" and volunteers stormed the three ships and in a three-hour fracas, broke open all 342 of the tea chests and dumped them into the harbor, which was at low tide.

The attackers were conscientious, and they damaged no ship or other cargo. Only one man was injured, knocked unconscious by a collapsing winch. However, they had ruined 18,000 pounds worth of tea and infuriated the British government, particularly the king. Despite arresting a barber named Francis Eckley, who had been caught bragging about his participation, the Boston authorities were unable to find anyone who could identify the protestors. Patriots tarred and feathered Eckley's accuser in retaliation. George III specifically noted the Tea Party in his address to Parliament, and he and Prime Minister Lord North pushed through the Coercive Acts by April 1774. The Coercive Acts were designed to punish Boston and the colony of Massachusetts. They sparked further protests and eventually, war between Britain and her American colonies.

Although usually considered by itself, the Boston Tea Party was a natural growth of other protests against the British administration in Boston, centered on royal governor Thomas Hutchinson and his subordinates. Until the publication of Thomas Paine's Common Sense in 1776, these protests were notable in their careful avoidance of blaming George III, instead focusing on his council or colonial administrators. The costumes and violence of the Tea Party were also an outgrowth of regular crowd demonstrations in Boston, including burning Catholic figures in effigy, vandalizing administrator's homes or intimidating customs and tax inspectors. Even when not politically motivated, the apprentices and laborers of Boston also engaged in highly charged territorial contests that often ended in injuries and rowdy outbursts, and were led by men who took pains to hide their appearance using symbolic disguises. In all these respects, it was not the Tea Party itself that was unusual, but the British reaction to it.

Remember Dave, this is the new 'Tea Party', not to be confused with the old 'Tea Party'. Though a good Marxist tool such as yourself is good at spreading Barry's message.

Dave the 'original' Boston Tea Party was against the Excessive Taxes and Corruption of King George and Parliament.

If you don't want them to be confused with the original Tea Party, why call them "tea parties"?

I am a libertarian socialist, not a Marxist. We don't believe in "the state". Period.

The original Tea Party was against British fascism. The King and the British East India Company were in cahoots to put a bunch of independent American merchants out of business.

These idiots protesting today are long on slogans but very short on substance. As far as I can tell they are doing the bidding of the status quo.

I have a word of advice. Stay the fuck out of the way. Reagonomics [aka Voodoo Economics] is dead. All the Wal Mart shoppers in the world ain't gonna stop the progressives. Not after the last 8 years. Way to go, George.

Tea parties = republican rallies that do nothing to recruit voters.
Purely political.

Notice these tea parties didn't exist a year ago, although the tax rate hasn't been raised for 99 percent of Americans.

She can't hear because they are yelling. Even the guy she gets into it with has to ask that old guy to stop pushing him.

At least fox tells the lies..

Fox Lies ...again...Cavuto caught on tape tripling tea bagger estimate

Here's Fox News host Neil Cavuto talking with a producer at 12:10PM, recorded on a live mic (update: Cavuto was in Sacramento):

CAVUTO: Any estimates on how many people are here?

PRODUCER: No, we're trying to get...

CAVUTO: There's gotta' be 5,000.

PRODUCER: Oh, at least. You know, I mean the cops aren't going to tell us, and we've been trying to get ahold of the PR person to give us their number, but I think 5,000. You can say it's starting at 5,000 [unintelligble, but sounds like "and maybe it's more."].

And here's Cavuto less than ten minutes later, tripling his crowd estimate during his on-air broadcast:

CAVUTO: I know you cover a lot of these things Shep, so you're probably better at estimating crowd sizes than I am. They were expecting 5,000 here, it's got to be easily double, if not triple that.

The Bush family got much of their fortune from trading with Hitler?
Where was your outrage?

The US government seized the Bush's assests for helping the nazi's.

"On October 20, 1942, the U.S. government ordered the seizure of Nazi German banking operations in New York City. President Franklin

Roosevelt's Alien Property Custodian, Leo T. Crowley, signed Vesting Order Number 248 seizing the property of Prescott Bush under the Trading with the Enemy Act."

I'm betting that he had a good tea party today. Hanging out with all the

1016. Magic Words in Politics

China is the largest foreign holder of U.S. government bonds. But, instead of buying more of those bonds as our skyrocketing national debt leads to more bonds being issued, China has been selling some of its U.S. government bonds this year.

The Chinese are no fools. They know that all this unbridled spending-- even when it is called "investment"-- means that inflation is coming. That in turn means that the dollars with which U.S. government bonds will be paid off will be worth a lot less than the dollars with which the bonds were bought.

Governments around the world have played this game for centuries, robbing those who trusted them enough to buy their bonds. Like Bernard Madoff, they call it "investment."

Inflation also means that all the talk about how higher taxes will be confined to "the rich" is nonsense. Inflation is a hidden tax that takes away the value of money held by everyone at every income level.

Abraham Lincoln once asked an audience how many legs a dog has if you count the tail as a leg. When they answered "five," Lincoln told them that the answer was four. The fact that you called the tail a leg did not make it a leg.

It is too bad that Lincoln is not still around today. He might emancipate us all from our enslavement to words.

When you call something a "stimulus" package, that does not mean that it actually stimulates. The way individuals, banks and businesses in general are hanging onto their money suggests that "sedative" package might be more accurate.

This is not a new phenomenon, peculiar to this administration. President Bush's "stimulus" package did not stimulate either. The same was true back in the days of Franklin D. Roosevelt's "pump-priming" by spending government money to get private money flowing.

The circulation of money slowed down back then the way it has slowed down today.

Some of our biggest political fallacies come from accepting words as evidence of realities. "Rent control" laws do not control rent and "gun control" laws do not control guns.

The big cities with the tightest rent control laws in the nation are New York and San Francisco. The nation's highest rents are in New York and the second-highest are in San Francisco.

There is a very straightforward explanation for that. Strong rent control laws can bring residential building to a screeching halt. Once politicians have milked the political advantages of passing rent control laws, they have to avoid a backlash if all building of apartments stops.

That leads to an escape hatch in the rent control law. Luxury apartments with rents above a certain level are exempted. That leads to the shifting of resources away from building affordable housing to building housing that is unaffordable.

It is even more painfully obvious that "gun control" laws do not control guns. The District of Columbia's very strong laws against gun ownership have done nothing to stop the high murder rate in Washington.

New York had very strong gun control laws decades before London did. But the murder rate in New York has been some multiple of that in London for more than two centuries, regardless of which city had the stronger gun control laws at a given time.

Back in 1954, when there were no restrictions on owning shotguns in England and there were far more owners of pistols then than there were decades later, there were only 12 cases of armed robbery in London.

By the 1990s, after stringent gun controls laws were imposed, there were well over a thousand armed robberies a year in London. In the late 1990s, after an almost total ban on handguns in England, gun crimes went up another ten percent.

The reason-- too obvious to be accepted by the intelligentsia -- is that law-abiding people became more defenseless against criminals who ignored the law and kept their guns.

The same thing applies internationally. We might keep that in mind as the Obama administration pursues the will o' the wisp of banning nuclear weapons. If that Utopian dream ever came true, those nations naive enough to get rid of their nuclear weapons would be at the mercy of those rogue states who kept theirs.

They're "extremists Islamists." ;-) I know what you're saying BC but I heard Bush say the same thing to, it is that religion that they all claim, how fortunate or unfortunate that may be.

Batavia Ohio? I think not, nice try. Why do you even answer Bob? In all seriousness, if you don't like what I post you don't have to answer every one. I don't respond to every post you throw out, matter of fact I hardly respond to you at all. I've tried to kid around and be nice to you, but apparently it isn't working. Just ignore me please.

So what?

Why and for what reason is O spending that money?

All you've proven is that Bush left us one hell of a mess that is going to take a H-U-G-E amount of money to -try- and repair.

Once each year, my sister and brother in law go to Round Top,Texas (the Biggest Little City in Texas) to antique shows over there.

When I was in the Army and I got back from my year (1964) in Vietnam, I spent ten months at Fort Hood,Texas.
At first at Fort Hood, I was in 502 Supply and Transportation Company (we called it S.it and Trash) for about two months.I worked at a fuel section there, breathing in that silty dust all day long.One time Seargent West came by there and he asked me if I would give a speech about my year in Vietnam.I don't do speeches, I told him, NO.
I reckon they got pizzed off about that because I was transfered to the 22nd Chemical Company at Fort Hood.I liked that a hell of a lot better than the 502nd Supply and Transportation Company, even though our barracks in the 22nd Chemical Company were the old fashioned World War Two era two story wooden barracks and not air conditioned.Every once in a while in the 22nd Chemical Company I pulled CQ early morning Formation.I liked that,,,

The only prez America has ever had in my lifetime (in my lifetime) was Dwight David Eisenhower.He was Swedish Jewish/Jewish/Swedish by ancestry.Ausenhower.

Back around June 1992 when I was on vacation, I visited Mexico for five days.Monterey, Reynosa, Gral Bravo, Saltillo, Monterey.On the way back home I stopped at the Greyhound (maybe it was the Trailways bush station) bus station in Corpus Christi to wash my face and shave my mug.While I was shaving a dude came in there and he went to the urinal.About two or three minutes later another dude came in there.He went to the urinal and he started giving the other dude a hand job.I didn't bother to finish shaving, I got the hell away from there.

In Galveston at night time I was driving along the Galveston seawall highway, a guy driving an older model Lincoln car was following me.He would pull around ahead of my van and slow down, he did that several times.I had to stop for gas.I went into the gas station to pay for my gas, he went into the rest room.I got the hell away from there.

Examiner: Fidrych suffocated to death
Comment Email Print Share
Associated Press

NORTHBOROUGH, Mass. -- Former All-Star pitcher Mark Fidrych suffocated after his clothes became entangled with a spinning part on the truck he was working on, Massachusetts authorities said Thursday.

The state medical examiner's office ruled the death an accident, according to a release from the Worcester District Attorney's office.

A friend found Fidrych, 54, beneath a 10-wheel dump truck on Monday at his Northborough farm.

"He appeared to have been working on the truck when his clothes became tangled in the truck's power takeoff shaft," District Attorney Joseph Early Jr. said in a statement.

A power takeoff shaft is a driveshaft that spins at high speed and can be used to power another piece of equipment.

The investigation is now closed, a spokesman for the DA said.

Fidrych went 19-9 with a 2.34 ERA for the Detroit Tigers in 1976 to win the AL Rookie of the Year award, becoming as famous for his mop of curly hair and on-the-mound antics as his skills.

The high road is often too hard to travel.
It's easier to obey the urge of base instincts than reason.

I agree. As long as there is a Israel there will always be war. The Islamist will try an convince you that if Israel just gave up and gave them the land that it would all be over. That is nonsense, then they would wage war to whatever country took in any of the Jews.

This all goes back to biblical times and won't be finished till the very end, and that will be in Israel of all places. You don't have to be a rocket scientist or <ahem> have a Phd. to figure it out and how it will end.

I support some programs that are identified with the left, I suppose.
But I certainly don't subscribe to all or even most of their philosophy.

Left Libertarian isn't a bad place to be as you'd be in the company of Gandhi and Mandella.

"SiPort Releases Single-Chip Solution"

"The Silicon Valley company says its SP1010 single-chip solution for HD Radio draws the lowest power of all IBOC chips — 110 milliwatts, roughly equivalent to 15 to 20 hours of battery life on a portable device, spokesman Sunder Velamuri told Radio World. That compares to a prototype KRI armband MP3 player/HD Radio receiver that iBiquity displayed in its booth at CES, the smallest device that an IBOC chip has been integrated into so far. That device uses 500 milliwatts of power and would last between six to eight hours after one charge, Velamuri estimated."

From Tad Cook, K7RA

To all radio amateurs

ARLP016 Propagation de K7RA

Still no sunspots, and again we saw a prediction for slightly higher solar flux slip away. If you go to http://www.swpc.noaa.gov/ftpmenu/forecasts/45DF.html and click on any forecast prior to April 14, you will see solar flux numbers at 72 predicted for the end of this month. But in the few days since then, any predicted values over 70 have vanished, including another set of slightly higher numbers in late May.

NASA had a recent release with new information about coronal mass ejections as observed by the STEREO mission. See it at http://science.nasa.gov/headlines/y2009/14apr_3dcme.htm.

Hank Pfizenmayer, K7HP of Phoenix, Arizona has been using beacons to let him know when bands are open, and he is discovering what others have reported, that when a band is quiet, this doesn't mean the openings are not there.

Hank wrote, "While the VK9GMW folks have been on, I have been checking the beacons on 17 and 15 meters and on 15 specifically, well over half the days between 2000z and 0300z I hear the ZL6B beacon - usually hear the KH6, sometimes the W6. This is with a KT34 at 42 feet in a noisy suburban location. Interesting I have not heard the VK beacon at all - about 1900 miles farther but essentially same beam heading Of course the LU and OA beacons are there almost every day even with the antenna on VK/ZL. Several days I can copy the ZL6B beacon at the 100 mW step."

Jeff Hartley, N8II of Shepherdstown, West Virginia had some thoughts to share with Mickey, K5ML, who had comments featured in last week's bulletin.

He writes, "I saw your comments in the ARRL prop bulletin and felt compelled to say few things about conditions now vs. the top of the cycle."

He continues, "Some parts of the world, mainly some days are much better than others as was the case this week on April 7th when Spain was worked on 17M at 2130z and 30M was wide open to EU, AF working 3B8MM, and the western Pacific at the same time allowing me to catch Mellish Reef for a new one on 30M."

He goes on to say, "SE Asia (even JAs are not easy from here near DC) are extremely difficult to work here at the bottom of the cycle especially mid-winter, because there is essentially no useable ionosphere around the north pole. Also, many ops are poorly equipped for 10 MHz and below with very limited antennas, but have a tribander for 10-20M. Some days are much better than others as was the case this week on April 7th when Spain was worked on 17M at 2130z and 30M was wide open to EU, AF working 3B8MM, and the western Pacific at the same time allowing me to catch Mellish Reef for a new one on 30M."

He ends with, "With your vertical and a good 10M opening, you will be amazed how strong long haul DX signals are and how easy they are to work. I was fairly new to DXing in the fall of 1978 and had just put up a 4 el Yagi for 10M at 45 ft and it was a real killer into everywhere from central Asia, to Europe, Africa and SA. RH8EAA in Turkmenistan was S9+ in Oct 78, day after day and I was able to call CQ and get many answers from UA9 and UL7 (now UN). During one CQWW CW contest, G4BUO called me running less than one milliwatt and I was able to copy him on the 2nd try! So, long story shortened it is a lot more fun with higher solar activity. 6 meters will be full of activity at the cycle peak, and I can't wait for the next one. In the meantime, I'm having fun chasing countries on 160 and 30 meters primarily and hunting counties as well."

If you would like to make a comment or have a tip for our readers, email the author at, k7ra@arrl.net.

For more information concerning radio propagation, see the ARRL Technical Information Service web page at, http://www.arrl.org/tis/info/propagation.html. For a detailed explanation of the numbers used in this bulletin, see http://www.arrl.org/tis/info/k9la-prop.html. An archive of past propagation bulletins is at http://www.arrl.org/w1aw/prop/.

Monthly propagation charts between four USA regions and twelve overseas locations are at http://www.arrl.org/qst/propcharts/.

Instructions for starting or ending email distribution of this bulletin are at http://www.arrl.org/w1aw.html#email.

Sunspot numbers for April 9 through 15 were 0, 0, 0, 0, 0, 0, and 0 with a mean of 0. 10.7 cm flux was 70.1, 69.4, 69.3, 69.3, 68.4, 69.4, and 69.4 with a mean of 69.3. Estimated planetary A indices were 12, 8, 9, 8, 4, 2 and 3 with a mean of 6.6. Estimated mid-latitude A indices were 9, 6, 7, 4, 3, 1 and 2 with a mean of 4.6.

I think this one may qualify as "Antique" even though it's transistor. I'm finding it impossible to find a service manual for it. I tried Sams first, and then Googled the hell out of it. It's not that rare a radio; some of you may have one or worked on one:

http://www.universal-radio.com/USED/u910lrg.jpg

Any hints on where I could find the service manual? Was this same radio made under another name? It looks a little like a Channel Mast 6248, but they are decidedly different. Any help would be appreciated.

Hope you find something. The problem is, it's Lloyd's, and not a big seller.
All their radios came with their own "manual", which consisted of a tiny schematic glued to the inside of the back cover.

If you claim to be either, it's worse than all that.. even if you have a brain, you are refusing to use it, and letting others do your thinking for Wasn't there some kind of rule in the sixty's that all imported radios had to have a schematic?

The Japanese stuck a postage sized schematic on the unit, there usually was no other documentation.

This one doesn't even have that. I really just need the alignment info.
It's easy to figure out on an old single-band AA5, but these multiband transistor sets are difficult enough even with the manual.

That's most likely true. There were a lot of import rules back then.
Lloyd's made some pretty good radios (and some pretty bad ones). In my experience, their AM only radios with the TRF stage were right up there with the Channel Master and Sony radios of the same type for reception, but they weren't quite up to the latter's audio quality. I suspect this particular radio probably wasn't too bad on the AM and SW bands, but I've yet to see one of these types that was worth spit on the VHF bands.

Christianity mite be better than Islam, but that's not the question. The real question is, what would be best?
Consider Stocism:
'Be fruitful and multiply'. No; be sure you have the resources to properly raise a child before siring one.

'Turn the other cheek'. No; consider what you may teach an innocent observer with your response to attack. If there be none, then what you may teach your attacker. If he be unteachable, then what you may teach yourself. But in any case, remember the divine may have further use for you, so keep your body in good condition.

'render unto Caesar'. No; Caesar is a thief who stole power, and you dont how him a damn dinari. You pay because he has a sword at your throat. To put him in the same class as your duty to the divine is blasphemy.

'obey your masters'. No; you did not create your own body, the divine did. How then can you claim to own the body of another? Do what you are forced to do and understand they have no right to demand obedience.

Saint Paul said that reason was not adequate to reach truth, that you needed faith. Stoicism says that if your reason is not adequate, then work on strengthening your reason. Then you can work on the truth.

Both Islam and Christianity are misogynistic. Stoicism recognizes that every successful man has a good woman behind him. Marriage is a form of slavery, but Stoicism says to avoid vows. You dunno how you will feel in the future.

These religions have been having at each other for centuries. Its time to try something that mite work for a change. From Aristotle, Stoics saw the problem was not evil, but insanity. What is needed is better case management.

We can raise a full glass of your favorite adult beverage to all the Tea Party participants - and to the one group of Americans the Zerocrats despise above all others: our soldiers in the US military.

All of us want to raise our glass the highest this week to the Navy SEALs who popped those three Somali pirates. And I'm sure you want to hear the real story of what happened. Especially because there is a revoltingly opportunistic and cowardly side to it. Guess which side Zero is on.

Why, for example, did it take SEAL Team Six (aka DEVGRU, Navy Special Warfare Development Group, the Navy's equivalent of Delta Force) over 36 hours to get to the scene?

Because Zero refused to authorize the SEAL deployment for those 36 hours, during which the OSC - the on scene commander, Cmdr. Frank Castellano of the USS Bainbridge - repeatedly requested them.

firm, that had fought against healthcare and minimum-wage efforts while hailing deregulation.
Anti-tax "tea party" organizers are delivering one million tea bags to a Washington, D.C., park Wednesday morning - to promote protests across the country by people they say are fed up with high taxes and excess spending.

The real Boston Tea Party was a protest against huge corporate tax cuts for the British East India Company, the largest trans-national corporation then in existence. This corporate tax cut threatened to decimate small Colonial businesses by helping the BEIC pull a Wal-Mart against small entrepreneurial tea shops, and individuals began a revolt that kicked-off a series of events that ended in the creation of The United States of America.
They covered their faces, massed in the streets, and destroyed the property of a giant global corporation. Declaring an end to global trade run by the East India Company that was destroying local economies, this small, masked minority started a revolution with an act of rebellion later called the Boston Tea Party.
On a cold November day in 1773, activists gathered in a coastal town. The corporation had gone too far, and the two thousand people who'd jammed into the meeting hall were torn as to what to do about it. Unemployment was exploding and the economic crisis was deepening; corporate crime, governmental corruption spawned by corporate cash, and an ethos of greed were blamed. "Why do we wait?" demanded one at the meeting, a fisherman named George Hewes. "The more we delay, the more strength is acquired" by the company and its puppets in the government. "Now is the time to prove our courage," he said. Soon, the moment came when the crowd decided for direct action and rushed into the streets.
That is how I tell the story of the Boston Tea Party, now that I have read a first-person account of it. While striving to understand my nation's struggles against corporations, in a rare book store I came upon a first edition of "Retrospect of the Boston Tea Party with a Memoir of George R.T. Hewes, a Survivor of the Little Band of Patriots Who Drowned the Tea in Boston Harbor in 1773," and I jumped at the chance to buy it. Because the identities of the Boston Tea Party participants were hidden (other than Samuel Adams) and all were sworn to secrecy for the next 50 years, this account is the only first-person account of the event by a participant that exists. As I read, I began to understand the true causes of the American Revolution.
I learned that the Boston Tea Party resembled in many ways the growing modern-day protests against transnational corporations and small-town efforts to protect themselves from chain-store retailers or factory farms. The Tea Party's participants thought of themselves as protesters against the actions of the multinational East India Company.
Although schoolchildren are usually taught that the American Revolution was a rebellion against "taxation without representation," akin to modern day conservative taxpayer revolts, in fact what led to the revolution was rage against a transnational corporation that, by the 1760s, dominated trade from China to India to the Caribbean, and controlled nearly all commerce to and from North America, with subsidies and special dispensation from the British crown.
Hewes notes: "The [East India] Company received permission to transport tea, free of all duty, from Great Britain to America..." allowing it to wipe out New England-based tea wholesalers and mom-and-pop stores and take over the tea business in all of America. "Hence," wrote, "it was no longer the small vessels of private merchants, who went to vend tea for their own account in the ports of the colonies, but, on the contrary, ships of an enormous burthen, that transported immense quantities of this commodity ... The colonies were now arrived at the decisive moment when they must cast the dye, and determine their course ... "

A pamphlet was circulated through the colonies called The Alarm and signed by an enigmatic "Rusticus." One issue made clear the feelings of colonial Americans about England's largest transnational corporation and its behavior around the world: "Their Conduct in Asia, for some Years past, has given simple Proof, how little they regard the Laws of Nations, the Rights, Liberties, or Lives of Men. They have levied War, excited Rebellions, dethroned lawful Princes, and sacrificed Millions for the Sake of Gain. The Revenues of Mighty Kingdoms have entered their Coffers. And these not being sufficient to glut their Avarice, they have, by the most unparalleled Barbarities, Extortions, and Monopolies, stripped the miserable Inhabitants of their Property, and reduced whole Provinces to Indigence and Ruin. Fifteen hundred Thousands, it is said, perished by Famine in one Year, not because the Earth denied its Fruits; but [because] this Company and their Servants engulfed all the Necessaries of Life, and set them at so high a Price that the poor could not purchase them."

After protesters had turned back the Company's ships in Philadelphia and New York, Hewes writes, "In Boston the general voice declared the time was come to face the storm."

The citizens of the colonies were preparing to throw off one of the corporations that for almost 200 years had determined nearly every aspect of their lives through its economic and political power. They were planning to destroy the goods of the world's largest multinational corporation, intimidate its employees, and face down the guns of the government that supported it.

The queen's corporation

The East India Company's influence had always been pervasive in the colonies. Indeed, it was not the Puritans but the East India Company that founded America. The Puritans traveled to America on ships owned by the East India Company, which had already established the first colony in North America, at Jamestown, in the Company-owned Commonwealth of Virginia, stretching from the Atlantic Ocean to the Mississippi. The commonwealth was named after the "Virgin Queen," Elizabeth, who had chartered the corporation.

Elizabeth was trying to make England a player in the new global trade sparked by the European "discovery" of the Americas. The wealth Spain began extracting from the New World caught the attention of the European powers. In many European countries, particularly Holland and France, consortiums were put together to finance ships to sail the seas. In 1580, Queen Elizabeth became the largest shareholder in The Golden Hind, a ship owned by Sir Francis Drake.

The investment worked out well for Queen Elizabeth. There's no record of exactly how much she made when Drake paid her share of the Hind's dividends to her, but it was undoubtedly vast, since Drake himself and the other minor shareholders all received a 5000 percent return on their investment. Plus, because the queen placed a maximum loss to the initial investors of their investment amount only, it was a low-risk investment (for the investors at least-creditors, such as suppliers of provisions for the voyages or wood for the ships, or employees, for example, would be left unpaid if the venture failed, just as in a modern-day corporation). She was endorsing an investment model that led to the modern limited-liability corporation.

After making a fortune on Drake's expeditions, Elizabeth started looking for a more permanent arrangement. She authorized a group of 218 London merchants and noblemen to form a corporation. The East India Company was born on December 31, 1600.

By the 1760s, the East India Company's power had grown massive and worldwide. However, this rapid expansion, trying to keep ahead of the Dutch trading companies, was a mixed blessing, as the company went deep in debt to support its growth, and by 1770 found itself nearly bankrupt.

The company turned to a strategy that multinational corporations follow to this day: They lobbied for laws that would make it easy for them to put their small-business competitors out of business.

Most of the members of the British government and royalty (including the king) were stockholders in the East India Company, so it was easy to get laws passed in its interests. Among the Company's biggest and most vexing problems were American colonial entrepreneurs, who ran their own small ships to bring tea and other goods directly into America without routing them through Britain or through the Company. Between 1681 and 1773, a series of laws were passed granting the Company monopoly on tea sold in the American colonies and exempting it from tea taxes. Thus, the Company was able to lower its tea prices to undercut the prices of the local importers and the small tea houses in every town in America. But the colonists were unappreciative of their colonies being used as a profit center for the multinational corporation.

Boston's million-dollar tea party

And so, Hewes says, on a cold November evening of 1773, the first of the East India Company's ships of tax-free tea arrived. The next morning, a pamphlet was widely circulated calling on patriots to meet at Faneuil Hall to discuss resistance to the East India Company and its tea. "Things thus appeared to be hastening to a disastrous issue. The people of the country arrived in great numbers, the inhabitants of the town assembled. This assembly, on the 16th of December 1773, was the most numerous ever known, there being more than 2000 from the country present," said Hewes.

The group called for a vote on whether to oppose the landing of the tea. The vote was unanimously affirmative, and it is related by one historian of that scene "that a person disguised after the manner of the Indians, who was in the gallery, shouted at this juncture, the cry of war; and that the meeting dissolved in the twinkling of an eye, and the multitude rushed in a mass to Griffin's wharf."

That night, Hewes dressed as an Indian, blackening his face with coal dust, and joined crowds of other men in hacking apart the chests of tea and throwing them into the harbor. In all, the 342 chests of tea-over 90,000 pounds-thrown overboard that night were enough to make 24 million cups of tea and were valued by the East India Company at 9,659 Pounds Sterling or, in today's currency, just over $1 million.
In response, the British Parliament immediately passed the Boston Port Act stating that the port of Boston would be closed until the citizens of Boston reimbursed the East India Company for the tea they had destroyed. The colonists refused. A year and a half later, the colonists would again state their defiance of the East India Company and Great Britain by taking on British troops in an armed conflict at Lexington and Concord (the "shots heard 'round the world") on April 19, 1775.
That war-finally triggered by a transnational corporation and its government patrons trying to deny American colonists a fair and competitive local marketplace-would end with independence for the colonies.
The revolutionaries had put the East India Company in its place with the Boston Tea Party, and that, they thought, was the end of that.
Unfortunately, the Boston Tea Party was not the end; within 150 years, during the so-called Gilded Age, powerful rail, steel, and oil interests would rise up to begin a new form of oligarchy, capturing the newly-formed Republican Party in the 1880s, and have been working to establish a permanent wealthy and ruling class in this country ever since.

The data is supposed to have error correction. Maybe the errors are exceeding the maximum rate. If the system is engineered correctly you should not be able to hear problems due to errors but what is done right in IBOC.

The hiss doesn't go away for people that don't have HD, oh, like someone listening on a AR7030+. It isn't that the radio sidebands are so wide that they are getting the HD noise (OK, signal) because you can select a narrow filter on the 7030. Not all IBOC stations have this problem, so it could be pilot error of the broadcast tech that set it up.

Now the poor schmuck using a car radio, which doesn't have tight filters, has to put up with the IBOC noise. So they brickwall the high frequency content of the analog, add noise, then tell you it is for you own good. This is so nasty, Dick Cheney must be involved.

This is a pretty good radio. Even without an alignment, it's performs very well. And the build quality is abot as good as it got for that era. It reminds me of a Panasonic RF-5000 in that regard.

I guess I could connect the 75' random wire to the BA Recepter HD and see if it'll lock. I've only ever heard one MW HD station (710 from North Hollywood). The Mexican under KFI seems to be absent lately.

The IBOC signal is either side of the AM carrier. Each IBOC sideband is identical but out-of-phase with the other. The theory is the IBOC sidebands cancel each other out in your receiver. But if one sideband propagates better than the other (which is always the case once you get a few miles from the transmitter) the cancellation is not complete. This is when you hear the digital hash and the wubba-wubba sound.

For those of us using a radio with selectable sideband synchronous detection, but unable to choose USB and LSB at the same time (like my Drake SW2) we are forced to listen in plain AM.

Clear Channel has 2 full blown flamethrowers crippled by IBOC in California now. It's a shame. Citadel gets it. KGO and KKOH do not use IBOC at night. KFI and KFBK do, and it really diminishes their signals.

If you bother to look at the headers of the original post, you'll see that the poster has an agenda for his repost that all of you missed (look at the Summary header). Apparently, some hams swallowed that story hook, line, and sinker with the result that they have now formed an angry mob, complete with burning torches and pitchforks, and they are trying to track the original story author down. They have been called the "Fifty Cent Party," the "red vests" and the "red vanguard." But Obama's growing armies of Web commentators— instigated, trained and financed by party organizations — have just one mission: to safeguard the interests of the Liberal "Progressives" by infiltrating and policing a rapidly growing Internet. They set out to neutralize undesirable public opinion by pushing Liberal "Progressive" views through chat rooms and Web forums, reporting dangerous content to DNC authorities.

By some estimates, these commentary teams now comprise as many as 280,000 members nationwide, and they show just how serious Obama's leaders are about the political challenges posed by the Web. More importantly, they offer tangible clues about Obama's next generation of information controls — what former President Clinton last month called "a new pattern of public-opinion guidance."

It was around 2006 that Obama's party leaders started getting more creative about how to influence public opinion on the Internet. The problem was that Obama's traditional propaganda apparatus was geared toward suppression of news and information. This or that story, Web site or keyword could be blocked or filtered. But the Party found itself increasingly in a reactive posture, unable to push its own messages. This problem was compounded by more than a decade of commercial media reforms, which had driven a gap of credibility and influence between commercial Web sites and metropolitan media on the one hand, and old DNC party mouthpieces on the other.

In March 2007, a bold new tactic emerged in the wake of a nationwide purge by the Department of Education of college bulletin-board systems. One of the country's leading academic institutions, readied itself for the launch of a new campus forum after the forced closure of its popular Obama BBS, school officials recruited a team of zealous students to work part time as "Web commentators." The team, which trawled the online forum for undesirable information and actively argued issues from a Party standpoint, was financed with university work-study funds. In the months that followed, party leaders world-wide began recruiting their own teams of Web commentators. Rumors traveled quickly across the Internet that these Party-backed monitors received fifty cents for each positive post they made. The term Fifty Cent Party was born.

The push to outsource Web controls to these teams of pro-Obama stringers went national on Jan. 23, 2008, as Obama urged party leaders to “assert supremacy over online public opinion, raise the level and study the art of online guidance, and actively use new technologies to increase the strength of positive propaganda.” Sen. Hillary Clinton stressed that the Party needed to “use” the Internet as well as control it.

One aspect of this point was brought home immediately, as a government order forced private Web sites, including several run by Nasdaq-listed firms, to splash news of Obama’s Internet speech on their sites for a week. Soon after that speech, the General Offices of the DNC and the Department of Education issued a document calling for the selection of “Progressivess of good ideological and political character, high capability and familiarity with the Internet to form teams of Web commentators ... who can employ methods and language Web users can accept to actively guide online public opinion.”

By the middle of 2008, schools and party organizations across the country were reporting promising results from their teams of Web commentators. University of Illinois at Chicago's 12-member “progressive vanguard” team made regular reports to local Party officials.

Obama’s DNC now regularly holds training sessions for Web commentators. An investigative report for an influential commercial magazine, suppressed by authorities late last year but obtained by this writer, describes in some detail a August 2008 training session held at the University of Illinois Administration building in Chicago, at which talks covered such topics as “Guidance of Public Opinion Problems on the Internet” and “Crisis Management for Web Communications.”

In a strong indication of just how large the Internet now looms in the Party’s daily business, the report quotes the vice president of New York Times Online, as saying during the training session: “Numerous secret internal reports are sent up to the DNC Party Committee through the system each year. Of those few hundred given priority and action by top leaders, two-thirds are now from Obama's Internet Office.”

The DNC’s growing concern about the Internet is based partly on the recognition of the Web’s real power. Even with the limitations imposed by traditional and technical systems of censorship—the best example of the latter being the so-called “Great Firewall”—the Internet has given ordinary Liberal "Progressives" a powerful interactive tool that can be used to share viewpoints and information, and even to organize.

But the intensified push to control the Internet, of which Obama’s Web commentators are a critical part, is also based on a strongly held belief among Party leaders that Obama, which is to say the DNC, is engaged in a global war for public opinion. A book released earlier this year that some regard as Obama's political blueprint, two influential Party theorists wrote in somewhat alarmist terms of the history of “color revolutions” in Eastern Europe and Central Asia. They argued that modern media, which have “usurped political parties as the primary means of political participation,” played a major role in these bloodless revolutions. “The influence of the ruling party faces new challenges,” they wrote. “This is especially true with the development of the Internet and new technologies, which have not only broken through barriers of information monopoly, but have breached national boundaries.”

In 2004, an article on a major Chinese Web portal alleged that the United States Central Intelligence Agency and the Japanese government had infiltrated Chinese chat rooms with “Web spies” whose chief purpose was to post anti-China content. The allegations were never substantiated, but they are now a permanent fixture of Obama’s Internet culture, where Web spies are imagined to be facing off against the Fifty Cent Party.

Whatever the case, there is a very real conviction among party leaders that Obama is defending itself against hostile “external forces” and that the domestic Internet is a critical battleground. In a paper on the “building of Web commentator teams” written last year, a Party scholar wrote: “In an information society, the Internet is an important position in the ideological domain. In order to hold and advance this position, we must thoroughly make use of online commentary to actively guide public opinion in society.”

Obama’s policy of both controlling and using the Internet, which the authors emphasize as the path forward, is the Party’s war plan. Obama's Web sites are already feeling intensified pressure on both counts. “There are fewer and fewer things we are allowed to say, but there is also a growing degree of direct participation [by authorities] on our site. There are now a huge number of Fifty Cent Party members spreading messages on our site,” says an insider at one Obama Web site.

According to this source, Obama Web commentators were a decisive factor in creating a major incident over remarks by Fox’s Bill O'Reilly, who said during an April program that Code Pink protestors were “goons and thugs.” “Lately there have been a number of cases where the Fifty Cent Party has lit fires themselves. One of the most obvious was over Fox’s Bill O'Reilly. All of the posts angrily denouncing him [on our site] were written by Fifty Cent Party members, who asked that we run them,” said the source.

“Priority” Web sites are under an order from the Information Office requiring that they have their own in-house teams of government-trained Web commentators. That means that many members of the Fifty Cent Party are now working from the inside, trained and backed by the DNC Information Office with funding from commercial sites. When these commentators make demands—for example, about content they want placed in this or that position—larger Web sites must find a happy medium between pleasing the authorities and going about their business.

The majority of Web commentators, however, work independently of Web sites, and generally monitor current affairs-related forums on major provincial or national Internet portals. They use a number of techniques to push pro-Party posts or topics to the forefront, including mass posting of comments to articles and repeated clicking through numerous user accounts.

“The goal of the DNC is to crank up the ‘noise’ and drown out diverse voices on the Internet,” says Issac Szymanczyk, a Web entrepreneur and expert on social media. “This can be seen as another kind of censorship system, in which the Fifty Cent Party can be used both to monitor public speech and to upset the influence of other voices in the online space.”

Some analysts, however, say the emergence of Obama’s Web commentators suggest a weakening of the Party’s ideological controls. “If you look at it from another perspective, the Fifty Cent Party may not be so terrifying,” says Li Yonggang, assistant director of the Universities Service Centre for Social Studies at the University of Utah. “Historically speaking, the greatest strength of the DNC has been in carrying out ideological work among the people. Now, however, the notion of ‘doing ideological work’ has lost its luster. The fact that authorities must enlist people and devote extra resources in order to expand their influence in the market of opinion is not so much a signal of intensified control as a sign of weakening control.”

Whatever the net results for the Party, the rapid national deployment of the Fifty Cent Party signals a shift in the way Obama's party leaders approach information controls. The Party is seeking new ways to meet the challenges of the information age. And this is ultimately about more than just the Internet. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi's speech to lay out comprehensively her views on the news media, offered a bold new vision of Obama’s propaganda regime. Mrs. Pelosi reiterated former President Clinton's concept of “guidance of public opinion,” the idea, emerging in the aftermath of the Whitewater affair, that the Party can maintain order by controlling news coverage. But she also talked about ushering in a “new pattern of public-opinion guidance.”

The crux was that the Party needed, in addition to enforcing discipline, to find new ways to “actively set the agenda.” Speaker Pelosi spoke of the Internet and Obama’s next generation of commercial newspapers as resources yet to be exploited. “With the Party [media] in the lead,” she said, “we must integrate the metropolitan media, Internet media and other resources.”

Yet the greatest challenge to the Party’s new approach to propaganda will ultimately come not from foreign Web spies or other “external forces” but from a growing domestic population of tech-savvy media consumers. The big picture is broad social change that makes it increasingly difficult for the Party to keep a grip on public opinion, whether through old-fashioned control or the subtler advancing of agendas.

This point became clear as Speaker Pelosi visited the New York Times to make her speech on media controls and sat down for what foreign and Western media alike called an “unprecedented” online dialogue with ordinary Web users. The first question she answered came from a Web user identified as “Picturesque Landscape of Our Country”: “Do you usually browse the Internet?” he asked. “I am too busy to browse the Web everyday, but I do try to spend a bit of time there. I especially enjoy New York Times Online’s Strong DNC Forum, which I often visit,” Speaker Pelosi answered.

On the sidelines, the search engines were leaping into action. Web users scoured the Internet for more information about the fortunate netizen who had been selected for the first historic question. Before long the Web was riddled with posts reporting the results. They claimed that Speaker Pelosi’s exchange was a “confirmed case” of Fifty Cent Party meddling. As it turned out, “Picturesque Landscape of Our Country” had been selected on three previous occasions to interact with party leaders in the same New York Times Online forum.

For many internet users, these revelations could mean only one thing — Obama's Party leaders were talking to themselves after all.

1112. Magic Numbers in Politics [The Roots of a Racist Liberal Fascist Depression]

Words are not the only things that enable political rhetoric to magically transform reality. Numbers can be used just as creatively--and many voters are even more gullible about statistics than they are about words, apparently because statistics seem more objective.

The latest Congressional crusade is to clamp down on small finance companies that provide "payday loans" and check-cashing services in many low-income neighborhoods where there are few banks.

A common practice in making small loans of a few hundred dollars for a few weeks is to charge about $15 per hundred dollars lent. Politicians, the media, community activists and miscellaneous other busybodies are able to transform these numbers into annual percentage charges of several hundred percent, thereby creating moral melodramas and demands that the government "do something" about such "abuses."

Of course, these loans are seldom borrowed for a year. They are often loans for a couple of weeks or less, to meet some difficulty of the moment by people who live from payday to payday, whether they are being paid by a job or are receiving checks from Social Security, unemployment compensation or welfare.

The alternative to getting a payday loan may be having the electricity cut off or not having money to buy some medication. It is worse to borrow from illegal loan sharks, who have their own methods of collecting.

While $15 per hundred dollars may sound like a high rate of interest, it is not all interest. The finance company incurs costs just to process a loan, and these costs are a higher proportion of the total cost for a small loan than for a large loan.

When Oregon imposed a limit of 36 percent annual interest on what a finance company could charge, that meant charging less than $1.50 for a hundred dollar loan for a couple of weeks. A dollar and a half would probably not even cover the cost of processing the loan, much less the risks of default.

Not surprisingly, most of the small finance companies making payday loans in Oregon went out of business. But there are no statistics on how many low-income people turned to loan sharks or had their electricity cut off or had to do without their medicine.

This is just one of the many ways in which self-righteous busybodies leave havoc in their wake, while going away feeling noble.

Statistics played a key role in creating the housing boom and bust that led to the current economic crisis. Back in the 1990s, politicians, the media, community activists like Jesse Jackson and others all made a lot of noise about statistical studies showing that (1) non-whites had lower rates of home-ownership than whites, (2) were turned down for mortgage loans more often than whites, and (3) resorted to more expensive subprime mortgage loans than whites.

All this led to pressures and even quotas for banks to lend to more low-income and minority applicants. That in turn led to lower mortgage lending standards, more risky mortgages, higher default rates and the collapse of financial institutions that bought these more risky mortgages or securities based on them.

We have seen and heard the same kinds of things when statistics about other racial differences have been cited in the same strident voices when other statistics showed blacks laid off more than whites during economic downturns or the children of black women having higher infant mortality rates than the children of white women.

What we have very seldom seen or heard in such parading of statistics are other statistics-- which are readily available-- showing that (1) whites are turned down for mortgage loans more often than Asian Americans, (2) whites resort to subprime loans more often than Asian Americans, (3) whites have been laid off more in a downturn than Asian Americans, and (3) the children of white mothers have higher infant mortality rates than the children of mothers of Filipino or Mexican ancestry, even though these mothers receive less prenatal care than white mothers.

In other words, numbers do not "speak for themselves." Politicians, the media and others speak for them-- very loudly, very cleverly and often very wrongly.

Always wanted to get either a veterans license plate or an amateur radio license plate and the State of Michigan would not let one customize and combine the two.

However, I called the Secretary of State's office a few weeks ago and was told that the policy was changed, (well, sort of), and that I could, as of last June, obtain a 'personalized' veterans plate. I did, and now I have a nice veteran's plate with my callsign on it, thanks to my postal person who just delivered it.

Useful Idiots are naïve, foolish, ignorant of facts, unrealistically idealistic, dreamers, willfully in denial or deceptive. They hail from the ranks of the chronically unhappy, the anarchists, the aspiring revolutionaries, the neurotics who are at war with life, the disaffected alienated from government, corporations, and just about any and all institutions of society. The Useful Idiot can be a billionaire, a movie star, an academe of renown, a politician, or from any other segment of the population.

Arguably, the most dangerous Useful Idiot is the “Politically Correct.” He is the master practitioner of euphemism, hedging, doubletalk, and outright deception.

The Useful Idiot derives satisfaction from being anti-establishment. He finds perverse gratification in aiding the forces that aim to dismantle an existing order, whatever it may be: an order he neither approves of nor he feels he belongs to.

The Useful Idiot is conflicted and dishonest. He fails to look inside himself and discover the causes of his own problems and unhappiness while he readily enlists himself in causes that validate his distorted perception.

Understandably, it is easier to blame others and the outside world than to examine oneself with an eye to self-discovery and self-improvement. Furthermore, criticizing and complaining—liberal practices of the Useful Idiot—require little talent and energy. The Useful Idiot is a great armchair philosopher and “Monday Morning Quarterback.”

The Useful Idiot is not the same as a person who honestly has a different point of view. A society without honest and open differences of views is a dead society. Critical, different and fresh ideas are the life blood of a living society—the very anathema of autocracies where the official position is sacrosanct.

Even the “normal” spends a great deal more energy aiming to fix things out there than working to overcome his own flaws and shortcomings, or contribute positively to the larger society. People don’t like to take stock of what they are doing or not doing that is responsible for the conditions they disapprove.

The Useful Idiot, among other things, is a master practitioner of scapegoating. He assigns blame to others while absolving himself of responsibility, has a long handy list of candidates for blaming anything and everything, and by living a distorted life, he contributes to the ills of society.

They sound terrible in either side band selectable sync turned on with the Drakes. There is significant low frequency noises that are not easily describable along with the usual high frequency hiss. Kind of a low frequency rushing sound like water through a pipe. This sucks.

Now the only radio I have they still sound halfway decent on is the RX340 with its brick wall DSP filters. I can barely hear the low frequency noise and the high frequency hiss is minimized in AM mode.

So here is the upshot:
The worst sound is on the Drakes with side band selectable sync turned on. Next worse is with the AM sync on so the best is just AM mode with no sync. Same for the AR7030+ except it does not have the selectable side band sync. The best is the RX340 where both the low frequency noise and the high frequency hiss is not as prominent.

I'm complaining to KFI about this.

Yes you can be identified much easier now which is a great public service! For those interested here is a good picture of Mr. Lare's plate here: http://calwestray.tripod.com/images/morons.jpg

It's commendable that you identify yourself to the public so parents can bring their children inside and schools can "lock down" when you are in the neighborhood. But wouldn't a license plate with a picture of a fat stubby prick draped in the American flag with a dunce hat on its head be more accurate?

That would incorporate the PAYtriotic, CONservative, mentally disabled, unemployed and ex-military washout motif into your message.

Add an avatar of you donning your tin foil hat while ranting about the "evils of big gubermit" on the ham radio purchased with your monthly handout from the taxpayers (you know, those folks who unlike you have jobs and must work for their money) and you will have perfectly encapsuled your existence on a license plate.

Just trying to be helpful, hope this helps.

I just tried KOGO 600, KFI 640, KNX 1070 and turning on the sync detector didn't do anything to improve the audio. AM sounded the best.

Turning on side band selectable sync causes horrendous low frequency noise.

Was you talking about license plates? I have an antique car license plate on my 1914 Ford Model T car and an antique truck license plate on my 1978 Dodge van and a antique car license plate on my 1983 Dodge van.My 1948 Willys Jeep has a piece of the 1969 license plate still on there, I reckon the other part/other half of the license plate rusted off long before I bought my Jeep about five years ago.My Jeep has an old Jack & Heintz winch on the front bumper.The guy I bought my Jeep from, (for $300.00) his dogs had completely chewed through the two big thick electric cables of the winch.

I got a response from KFI already. Their online technical person Ernie Kristof said he would pass my comments along to the chief engineer Terry Grieger.

If you don't like the IBOC signal then tell the stations about it. If they get enough complaints maybe they will turn it off.

Aryan Nations recruiting again in northern Idaho

Sat Apr 18, 4:13 pm ET COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho – The Aryan Nations has returned to northern Idaho with what it is calling a "world headquarters" and a recruitment campaign.
Coeur d'Alene resident Jerald O'Brien, who has a large swastika tattoo on his scalp, is one of the leaders of the white supremacist group and said he expects membership to grow because of the election of President Barack Obama.
He told The Spokesman-Review newspaper that the president is the "greatest recruiting tool ever."
Residents of a Coeur d'Alene subdivision found recruitment fliers on their lawns Friday and O'Brien said more fliers will be distributed.
He said the group has "several handfuls" of members in the city.
The fliers show a young girl asking her father "Why did those dark men take mommy away?"
But many in the region reject the group.
"I saw Aryan Nations and put it in the trash," said Garvin Jones.
"What's wrong with these people? Give me a break. I bet if you went back in their family history, not one is 100 percent white."
The newspaper reported that most people interviewed about the fliers declined to be identified for fear of retribution.
The Aryan Nations had a compound in northern Idaho until 2000, when the group lost a $6.3 million civil judgment in favor of two people who sued after being attacked by Aryan Nations' members.
The Kootenai County Task Force on Human Relations has fought the Aryan Nations for decades and is offering its services to anyone threatened or harassed by the group.
"It's bound to be a small group of people trying once again to bring hate into the community," said Tony Stewart, a spokesman for the task force. "They don't have anywhere to operate from except a post office box."
O'Brien said he regularly flies two white supremacist flags outside his home on the east side of the city.

The newspaper reported that its files show O'Brien marching in a neo-Nazi parade in Coeur d'Alene in July 2004 and joining in a skinhead rally that drew eight people outside the Spokane County courthouse in Spokane, Wash., in June 2007.

O'Brien said he and Michael Lombard have taken over the group following longtime leader Richard Butler, who died in 2004.

The fliers are signed "Aryan Nations, Church of Jesus Christ Christian." O'Brien and Lombard are listed on the group's Web site as "pastors."

At least two residents who received the fliers called the Coeur d'Alene Police Department. Sgt. Christie Wood said no investigation is planned because distribution of fliers is protected free speech.

The Drake R8B, AR7030+, and RX340 all have DSB sync.

The Drake R8B and the RX340 have in addition side band selectable sync.

The Sony 7600G only has side band selectable sync.

Same story on all radios. Side band selectable sync generates a lot of this hard to describe low frequency rushing noise.

Any attempt to shift the passband to get better high frequency response just increase the high frequency hissing noise.

It's not great but so far the best thing is just AM, no sync, and passband centered.

Now I'm going to go check the car radio. I'll drive around a bit and see how it sounds.

By the Australia is now best on 17,715. 17,795 is not bad and NZ is still good on 15,720.

I can agree on Dr Laura. Rush I listen to once in a while. Usually when I decide to listen to him there is usually a guest in his place. Just luck I guess. Tom Leykis belongs under the biggest rock on the planet in KFI sounds just fine on the car radio. I even turned up the treble and could not hear the hiss. The stereo in the car is the top end that was offered at the time for the model with tweeters in the door columns.

They just sound bad on top end table top radios.

Apparently in our current political climate "socialism" has become a word that does not convey the horror it actually represents. It has become common and thus meaningless beyond the virtuous idea of "sharing" and "taking care of the poor".

People, especially among the ignorant -- particularly the college educated -- seem proud to call themselves "Socialists" today. And the supremely ignorant -- our politicians -- go a step further, and celebrate the word "Progressive" as though it had a glorious and honorable history.

I refuse to allow "Socialism" and "Progressivism" to be understood as benign, helpful, caring, sharing- as another way of saying "The Brotherhood of Man".

Socialism and Progressivism are cannibalism.

When I work, I use up hours of my life... my limited, mortal, human, physical life. The money I am paid represents the life I expended to earn it. My pay-my wealth-is my labor. It is the expenditure of some of my body's short, precious life on earth.

So when someone takes my money, they steal my hours of labor. They consume not only the fruits of my labor, but my labor itself, that labor which is the very expenditure of my life.

When someone loots and consumes the money I have earned, they consume the part of my life devoted to producing what they have taken.

What is that but cannibalism? A selfishness so profound, so inhuman, so greedy, so barbaric that it encourages and celebrates-and seeks to legally require- the consuming of the life's blood of one human by another.

That is the vicious reality of Socialism.

Don't let the bastards call it anything else.

Useful Idiots are naïve, foolish, ignorant of facts, unrealistically idealistic, dreamers, willfully in denial or deceptive. They hail from the ranks of the chronically unhappy, the anarchists, the aspiring revolutionaries, the neurotics who are at war with life, the disaffected alienated from government, corporations, and just about any and all institutions of society. The Useful Idiot can be a billionaire, a movie star, an academe of renown, a politician, or from any other segment of the population.

Arguably, the most dangerous Useful Idiot is the “Politically Correct.” He is the master practitioner of euphemism, hedging, doubletalk, and outright deception.

The Useful Idiot derives satisfaction from being anti-establishment. He finds perverse gratification in aiding the forces that aim to dismantle an existing order, whatever it may be: an order he neither approves of nor he feels he belongs to.

The Useful Idiot is conflicted and dishonest. He fails to look inside himself and discover the causes of his own problems and unhappiness while he readily enlists himself in causes that validate his distorted perception.

Understandably, it is easier to blame others and the outside world than to examine oneself with an eye to self-discovery and self-improvement. Furthermore, criticizing and complaining—liberal practices of the Useful Idiot—require little talent and energy. The Useful Idiot is a great armchair philosopher and “Monday Morning Quarterback.”

The Useful Idiot is not the same as a person who honestly has a different point of view. A society without honest and open differences of views is a dead society. Critical, different and fresh ideas are the life blood of a living society—the very anathema of autocracies where the official position is sacrosanct.

Even the “normal” spends a great deal more energy aiming to fix things out there than working to overcome his own flaws and shortcomings, or contribute positively to the larger society. People don’t like to take stock of what they are doing or not doing that is responsible for the conditions they disapprove.

The Useful Idiot, among other things, is a master practitioner of scapegoating. He assigns blame to others while absolving himself of responsibility, has a long handy list of candidates for blaming anything and everything, and by living a distorted life, he contributes to the ills of society.

The Useful Idiot may even engage in willful misinformation and deception when it suits him.

- Yes you can be identified much easier now which
- is a great public service! For those interested here
- is a good picture of Mr. Lare's plate here :

- It's commendable that you identify yourself to the

- That would incorporate the PAYtriotic, CONservative,

- Add an avatar of you donning your tin foil hat

Way back in the early years of the first automobiles in America, people really did make their own license plates.Usually, they would get a piece of wood and paint some numbers on it and that was that.

Number "4." for "Teabagger" Sounds About Right 834 up = love it & 632 down = hate it An intellectual patriot who protests wasteful government spending, and taxation without representation. A True American, a contributing member of society, a hard worker, one who sees it as their responsible to uphold the importance of our Constitution, an anti-liberal.
* Teabaggers do not feel it is their responsibility to provide for the lazy socialist liberals who pollute our great country.

As you all know I'm incapable of original thought since the head injury I sustained as a child. Consequently I spend all of my time plagarizing off topic posts using the cut and paste articles provided to me by the John Birch Society since the election of the negro Barrack HUSSEIN Obama as President.
As I am unemployed I have lots of free time I pledge to continue to do so for the next four years of his Presidency.

Oh sure I've ruined and will continue to ruin the shortwave newsgroup for all of you who merely desired to enjoy your radio hobby and selfishly believe this newsgroup is for shortwave radio information. But I will continue to post my inane off topic political rants because I must. My psychiatrist calls it therapeutic, I call it my DUTY!

As I canvass the neighborhoods of Madison, Wisconsin screaming and waving my latest top secret plan to save the United States of America I don't need to hear the usual taunts - "take your medication!" "Get lost you ignorant racist", "wasn't that you on the poster warning about the results of incest?" "how do you squueze that fat ass and beer belly into your klan robe?" "your brown pants go great with your yellow teeth!"it's called HEAD LICE - look into it!",

On and on it goes but I will not stop. Like my mentor at the local Klavern told me last night - they are just jealous of us because we have the inside scoop on the way things REALLY work in the world. And it's our Divinely appointed duty to educate the world about the grand conspiracy to enslave us all.

On a personal note; just to let you all know that I am indeed human and not some kind of mythical super hero here is a pic of me hard at work educating a youngster in one of my favorite groups - kiddies against Obama.WINK http://www.bobbyworks.com/images/fat%20man%20at%20computer.jpg

The theory doesn't even work well within the local signal area, since almost no radios use a detector that detects both sides of the envelope. Therefore, you have only one sideband being detected, and the IBOC hash will be present under the analog program material if the radio is sufficiently broadband (more than about 8 KHz).

Not only that, but remember that the life you expend working for someone else may also be at a wage that makes it hard to live without taking on some kind of debt. So then, if you have a mind to pay it back, you've then eslaved yourself to the banks who loaned you the money. Another nail in the coffin of freedom.

Most AM radios detect the signals on both sides of the carrier. I know of no commonly available radio that doesn't operate that way in the AM mode.

Detecting the positive or negative side of the AM envelope in the time domain does not equate to detecting USB or LSB. (i.e., a simple diode detector.)

The need for DSB in the sync mode is to cancel out components of the digital signal in the passband of the radio, not deal with the bulk of the digital signal that is well outside of the passband.

Cool Steve. all my cars have the Viet-Vet plates. except the vette, it's got the classic plate. in PA. we have had the Viet-Vet plate from 1980. and other wars/conflicts.
to me the Vet plate is a statement, not a vanity.

KNX has some significant skywave cancellation here in North L. A.
County. The signal varies quite a bit, but is not steady enough for the IBOC to lock. I get 570, 610, 710, 1220 and 1260 the best (in the daytime).

No, it still means that. It's just got a broader application now because capitalism has failed so obviously.

Evidently you should count yourself among the ignorant. "Progressive" does in fact have an honorable history. It's so obivous, I'll forgo citing it.

It's a silly analogy, and I can only imagine the stretching and pullingy you've have to do below to make it work.

Capitalism has been stealing labor for years. It extracts what it can for as cheap as it can get it. So, if your analogy applies to socialism, it applies to capitalism as well.

> When someone loots and consumes the money I have earned, they consume

When someone uses a person up with little reward, that's just as bad.

No. Actually, it was as I imaged it would be at the top of the page, a silly analogy you'd stretch and pull to make fit. Your fingers must be tired, from all that kneading.

Yes! Let's revel in the majesty that is capitalism.

If you live anywhere in this country and have a roof over your head, you are paying school taxes. Even if you rent, a portion of your monthly rent is used by the landlord to pay school taxes. No matter if you have children or never have them, money is taken from your pocket and given to schools.

Is this a bad thing?

Ah ha! We have the infamous Socialist Professor Alric Knebel, PhD

"progressive" propaganda lies.

I'll be more than happy to show the world the "honorable history" of the Neo-Communist propaganda prop called "Progressivism":

"has always been associated with the Democrat Party"

The democratic party of ancient times has no relevance to today. The Dixiecrats went to the republicans taking the KKK and racists with them. If Abraham Lincoln was alive today which party do you think he would belong to?

They also call your trade of hours for cash as income, when in fact it's an even trade between you and your employer, there is no income, you gained nothing. You agreed what your labor was valued at like two people trading ten dollar bills or trading dollars bills for gold/silver(No income tax on that trade is there?)because trading dollars for gold you gained nothing, and trading hours of your life for dollars you have gained nothing.

No value added and no Income. You are illegally being robbed and they call it Income tax.

The constitution says they may tax income derived from any source, but money traded for equal value is not "Income" is it?

And now, another R7A is up on eBay. Not as good condition, and the seller makes no mention of the actual filters installed. Should be interesting to see how this one fares.

"I want to say this about my state: When Strom Thurmond ran for president, we voted for him. We're proud of it. And if the rest of the country had followed our lead, we wouldn't have had all these problems over all these years."

Former U.S. Senate majority leader Trent Lott (R-Mississippi) speaking at Thurmonds 100th birthday

The Dixiecrat platform, which Lott is so proud his state supported, proclaimed: "We stand for the segregation of the races and the racial integrity of each race." Thurmond, who at the time was South Carolina's governor, expounded at the party's convention: "I want to tell you that there's not enough troops in the Army to force the Southern people to break down segregation and admit the Negro race into our theaters, into our swimming pools, into our homes and into our churches."

At a 1980 campaign rally for GOP presidential nominee Ronald Reagan in Mississippi, then-congressman Lott gushed about Thurmond: "You know, if we had elected this man 30 years ago, we wouldn't be in the mess we are in today." In fact, Lott helped convince Reagan to kick off the presidential campaign in Philadelphia, Mississippi. That city was famous for only one thing: being the place where three civil rights workers were murdered in 1964.

Which explains why 89% of McCains voters were white.

I'm beginning to think "Conservative" is a type of birth defect, in

Oh yeah! There's a vid someplace of rail cars with "shackles" inside them. The kooks claim these are for "prisoners". Sane people know that in an auto transporter car, AKA an autorack, something has to hold the cars to keep them from bouncing around. In the kooktardic universe, the cars remain still, all by themselves. After all, they are awfully heavy, aren't they?

There are no boundaries to kooktardic thought. They can make up all the bullshit they want, and there is almost always at least one other kooktard who swallows it completely.

I don't know if you've noticed, but I've left Telemundo alone the last few days. It's hard, very hard to do, since he keeps posting cwazy shit, as usual. The kooktard, and GOP is very strong in him.

- (1) whites are turned down for mortgage loans

70% {Whites} of the Population is Turned Down for Mortgage Loans more often than 5% {Asians} =DTM= 70:5 = 14:1 Ratio would naturally Stack-the-Deck

- (2) whites resort to subprime loans more often

Another meaningless number.

- (3) whites have been laid off more in a downturn

Another meaningless number.

- (3) the children of white mothers have higher infant

Now this could be a valid number.
* Missing are the African-American Infant Mortality Rate and the fact that there is a Significant Statistical Difference in Fact that the Numbers are just Numbers to be Bandied

- In other words, numbers do not "speak for themselves." Politicians,

- often very wrongly.

Rush said something very close to that, don't think he used the word

Aside from all that.. last I heard, piracy on the high seas was a crime. I believe maritime law at one point allowed the ship's captain to be judge, jury and, if needed, executioner (since there is no particular government in charge of the high seas, the captain was de-facto government). That the SEALS shot them is not beyond precedence, either, since it is not at all unusual for SWAT teams to shoot perps in domestic hostage situations.

Pandering to blacks is racism. Democrats pander to get the black vote.
They identify what the black race will vote for as a block and the Democrats go out and promise those items to blacks to get their vote.
that's profiling and racism.

When you take advantage of a race like that and then keep them on welfare for 40 years and keep promoting that you keep them in a cycle of poverty through government payments then you promote abortions for that group it begins to look like racism. Just a very behind the curtain kind of racism where you plan to use 1984 speak to make it look as though it's assistance and yet you are chaining them with economic chains to keep them thinking you are helping and yet you are manipulating them for one and only one thing, you want their numbers to keep your Democrat party in power.

If someone started a program to get white votes as Democrats have done to blacks, you'd be the first to call them all racists, white supremacists.

Margaret O'Brien once said Wallace Beery used to steal her lunch (at the movie studios when she was a kid) and he used to pinch her real hard too.
Wallace used to ''borrow'' movie studio props and take them home.He would rent them out to other movie studios.One time some people from MGM went out to his home.They turned over a boat.It had Property of MGM Studios painted on the bottom of the boat.Wallace used to go to the bars and get in some real knock down drag out fights.

Gee I thought the KGB tells the Democrats what to say or else, and the Democrats do their bidding and define the Republicans with mass disinformation so they will be ashamed of themselves. Meanwhile, The Dems bring about "change" by destroying the economy and proceed to surrender to the UN by apologizing to all countries who hate us, thereby validating and vindicating their hatred and reason for perpetrating violence against US citizens and interests. It's a no-brainer! Dems can accomplish that by blaming GW for everything in order to divert attention from their treason. Remember, these are the people who gave us the UN, backstabbed Chiang Kai-shek and brought us Mao, and excused the Soviet purges and likened the gulags to a cross between "Hudson's Bay Company and TVA". Don't forget the sale of the latest Nuke Weapons technology to China so that soon they will be able to Nuke the US and simply blame it on GW. BTW now that the Department of Homeland Security has been re-purposed to profile and target Christians, law abiding gun owners, people who speak out against "This Historic Election" and returning war veterans, the purges can begin.

Update! Obama has just sent orders for the fed gov't to cut the budget in the departments. Probably to purge the evil conservative America loving white man from the planet. Get ready to be "normalized". If you have a back yard better start planting your farm so the government can confiscate it for the revolution.

You snipped the part where someone blamed Bush for going to Iraq, to settle a vendetta for his father, that was just as unbelievable, but I needed to point out the fact that it can be as easily painted on Democrats as it can be used to vilify Bush. Accusing Bush was not a defensible accusation but sometimes we have to reverse the table to see the point.

I have an old Readers Digest book here. (bought it at a Goodwill store many years ago) The book has an article about how the U.S.Navy did a ''rehersal'' a few years before the Japs bombed Pearl Harbor.Way back then, there were a lot of Japs in Hawaii and other places in the area.Those Japs were paying very keen attention to exactly how the U.S.Navy did it.

The DX-398 has been in my possession for several years and is in excellent condition .

Someone in this group (do not recall the name) did some mods on these radios, including mine.
The mods improved SW/FM sensitivity and the AM Gain feature .
The kick stand had to be replaced and , since RS did not store them ,
I had to use the Sangean version, which comes in a lighter gray.
It comes with a "SANGEAN" Soft carrying case and an SANGEAN AC
adapter. No Box.

Asking $ 150.00

Apparently there is an article in a recent QST that describes adding DSP to the TR7. I was interested if anything in the article might also pertain to the R7.

No, the MSR-2 is I think a totally different animal (because of the switch selection of the readout). What was once proposed was the MR-3, which is a repackaged R7:

http://www.dproducts.be/DRAKE_MUSEUM/mr3_receiver.htm

It never went into production. This from elsewhere on the site:

Interview of Ray Midkiff, Father of the DSR and MSR Main Marine receivers

Just rcvd. your e-mail on Drake products. The RR1, RR2, and RR3 rcvrs were modified versions of the SPR4 Rcvrs. designed to meet the Marine Reserve standards. They were designed by Bill Robertson (no longer with Drake) and Steve Koogler (presently at Drake).

I designed the DSR-1 and DSR-2 receives intended as a commercial or laboratory synthesized all band unit and also the MSR-2 unit that was designed to meet the standards for a Marine Mains Rcvr.

The MR-3 (repackaged R7) would not have met the Mains spec.

"Have some FMs temporarily shut off their HD signals – to save on the electric bill?"

Yesterday's T-R-I lead story predicted that this 2009 NAB convention will have "truths revealed" about issues like HD Digital Radio – and sure enough, I got this email from a regional exec at a big group who knows of "several companies shutting down their HD signals in some markets to cut electrical cost. In our company [one of the top five or six groups] we would rather turn that off temporarily than cut more people loose. By the way – there have been no complaints or calls in the markets that have done it. And in one market I know of, we'll save about $3,000 to $5,000 annually. Right now, every penny counts. We are trying to save peoples' jobs."

Cool Steve. the man knows his Drakes. I got this receiver out of japan, i believe it was about 1989. came from a ship builder.
it was still in the packing, never opened or used. i never really checked the history of this model. it says marine radio on the lower front. i keep it in a rack with a few other different brands.
sure does pull in the NDB's. and being marine, i guess it's aimed at those freqs. but, as i said, i would love to have a clean R7 in my collection. what's the special draw on the RV-75-VFO? the bids on ebay are going up fast. BTW, the switch's for the readout work great, no need for a keypad.

Well, as far as I know, it eliminates the drift that the 7 line has before it warms up. And, not 100% sure about this, but I think the tuning 'resolution' may be better as well.

I did briefly have an RV75, but could not find the 1544 adapter needed for use with the R7/A. In retrospect I suppose I could have possibly had someone cobble up whatever is in the 1544 somehow so that I could use it.

I did make some money selling it, but still wish I had it.

Pricey now, and at the same time, I have to ask myself if it would help me hear anything... no. Would it help me QSL something I've already heard... no.

President Barack Obama scored major political points for the successful rescue of Captain Richard Phillips from his Somali pirate captors. Media headlines hailed his “decisive leadership” in his baptism under fire. However, scuttlebutt from the Navy community claims that the rescue succeeded in spite of Obama’s indecisiveness and interference, not because of his leadership. A harsh critique of the standoff by an anonymous Navy veteran that is circulating widely claims that Team Obama attempted to micromanage the situation, overruling the on-scene commander (OSC) and imposing ridiculous Rules Of Engagement (ROE) that repeatedly prevented the Navy SEAL shooters from taking out the pirates.

“What should have been a standoff lasting only hours — as long as it took the USS Bainbridge and its team of NSWC [Naval Surface Warfare Center] operators to steam to the location — became an embarrassing four day and counting standoff between a ragtag handful of criminals with rifles and a U.S. Navy warship,” the critique says.

The critique, which claims to be based on conversations with Navy SEALs, notes: “Philips threw himself off of his lifeboat prison, enabling Navy shooters onboard the destroyer a clear shot at his captors — and none was taken. The guidance from National Command Authority — the president of the United States, Barack Obama — had been clear: a peaceful solution was the only acceptable outcome to this standoff unless the hostage’s life was in clear, extreme danger.” The critique cites a litany of specific interferences that allegedly prolonged the standoff for days and endangered the life of Capt. Phillips.

A Special Forces veteran contacted by The New American said he “couldn’t vouch for all the specifics in the critique,” but that all the main points “appeared to be valid on the face of it.” The most obvious fact, he noted, was that when Capt. Phillips heroically jumped into the sea, “the SEALs would have shot the pirates or the Bainbridge would have blown them out of the water,” except for being countermanded by Obama.

All of us want to raise our glass the highest this week to the Navy SEALs who popped those three Somali pirates. And I'm sure you want to hear the real story of what happened. Especially because there is a revoltingly opportunistic and cowardly side to it. Guess which side Zero is on.

Why, for example, did it take SEAL Team Six (aka DEVGRU, Navy Special Warfare Development Group, the Navy's equivalent of Delta Force) over 36 hours to get to the scene?

Because Zero refused to authorize the SEAL deployment for those 36 hours, during which the OSC - the on scene commander, Cmdr. Frank Castellano of the USS Bainbridge - repeatedly requested them.

I have no pity for you kook'tard. You reap what you sow and for you

It wasn't much of a surprise. Churchill spent the night before praying the attack would go well, just so the States would enter the War.

==========
President Roosevelt (FDR) provoked the attack, knew about it in advance and covered up his failure to warn the Hawaiian commanders. FDR needed the attack to sucker Hitler to declare war, since the public and Congress were overwhelmingly against entering the war in Europe. It was his backdoor to war.

You bet. Four days before they got their revenge. It took three or four separate trials, but they finally got the verdict they wanted.

The business men were actually money changers, not lenders. The temple accepted only Hebrew or Tyrian money....so, for a profit, the changers exchanged foreign currencies. The Temple seemed like a nice, centrally located venue. Location, location, location.

LOL. Such irony, Telemundo. You've never seen a quote from a Republican you haven't taken as gospel.

Do you believe that the chains in autoracks are for people? After all, you probably believe the laws of physics are a commie plot to wreck our economy. Or something equally as whacky.

The kooktard is so very strong in you.

You sure have strange ideas. Where does this perverse stuff come from anyway? Don't answer, that's a rhetorical question.

The Book of Deuteronomy says it is OK to charge interest to a "stranger." But don't charge your "brother."

"Stranger" vs. "brother" is apparently interpreted as meaning foreigner vs Isrealite.

I'm not sure what it says in there about CDOs, or derivatives, or credit swaps, or mortgage-backed securities.

Just stuff that is posted on the same sort of kookpages that have Obama

911 truth type kookpages. Where your kind of kooktard posts all kinds of comical stuff.

You don't understand the concept, so I have to answer, or you'll just make up some crazy stuff like you usually do.

Somewhere in there (I don't feel like looking it up ATM) it says that usury (excessive interest, over 10%, IIRC) is a sin.

Good post RHF.

I really don't get where people think that this stuff is aimed at them. People need to use their brains. The way I see it, DHS is not talking about people like Roy's dad, or even idiots like Rushbo.. they're talking about folks like Tim McVeigh, the Unabomber and Eric Rudolph. Also, some (though by no means even a majority) of the militia folks come hazardously close to seditious. They also keep a close eye on left fringe groups like PeTA and the Animal Defense League. All of the above bear keeping an eye on.

Should they also keep an eye on folks like William Ayers and Bernardine Dohrn,

Not sure who Dohrn is, but Ayers has priors, and yes, bears scrutiny.

My father was a veteran who lived off federal contracts and who cheered when JFK was killed. My father feared fluoridated water and desegregation. He was very crazy and capable of doing great harm. His field was tactical weaponry. He could've snapped at any time.

John Dean, a President Nixon staffer as Watergate was about to unfold, told his boss, "There is a cancer on your presidency."

Would any member of President Obama's staff dare tell him any such thing today?

Watergate was Nixon's 800-pound gorilla everybody talked about, who sat there until he broke the sofa. The location of Obama's birth is an 800-pound gorilla that gets fatter every day and nobody at least nobody in major media likes to admit its existence. There's never been a coming-together of factors resembling this one in America's entire political history.

At no point until now has the birthplace of a president been anything more than a local chamber-of-commerce item of pride (where I come, from they're still arguing whether President James Polk was born in Tennessee or North Carolina!). All of a sudden the question of President Obama's birth place threatens to undermine his very eligibility to serve, and to toss America into a constitutional crisis of unfathomable proportions.

What was their safety net to ensure people don't die in the bombings?
I mean.... I get a ticket if I forget to wear a seat belt, is there a new Federal standard like the Airbags or seatbelt standards that they met to be sure William Ayers and Bernardine were doing safe terrorist bombings?

They didn't even get a ticket did they, and how many lives did they risk with their behavior??

No, instead, we should be RHF-nistas who abuse logic to the point of insanity. Obama's not preaching hate. He's preaching vigilance against internal extremists, liberals included, as witnessed by yesterday's news about how Justice and the FBI are going after animal rights extremists. (All this ignores surveillance of conservative extremists under the Bush administration!)

RHF: The definition of confusion.

Why are conservatives so desperate in their attempts to oppose Obama?
Why are they being such hypocrites?

Christians are especially dangerous because they don't believe in "man's laws". They think any behavior is kosher if it advances their quest for world domination.

Much as I hate to be the bearer of bad news, I must report the shocking facts: Medical care is medical care. Nothing more and nothing less.

This may not seem like a breakthrough on the frontiers of knowledge. But it completely contradicts what is being said by many of those who are urging "universal health care" because so many Americans lack health insurance.

Insurance is not medical care. Indeed, health care is not the same as medical care. Countries with universal health care do not have more or better medical care.

The bottom line is medical care. But the rhetoric and the talking points are about insurance. Many people who could afford health insurance do not choose to have it because they know that medical care will be available at the nearest emergency room, whether they have insurance or not.

This is especially true for young people, who do not anticipate long-term medical problems and who can always get a broken leg or an allergy attack taken care of at an emergency room -- and spend their money on a more upscale lifestyle.

This may not be a wise decision but it is their decision, and there is no reason why other people should lose the right to make decisions for themselves because some people make questionable decisions.

If you don't think government bureaucrats can make questionable decisions, then you haven't dealt with many government bureaucrats.

It is one thing to deal with bureaucrats when you are at the Department of Motor Vehicles and in good health. It is something else when you have to deal with bureaucrats when you are lying on a gurney and bleeding or are doubled over in pain on a hospital bed.

People who believe in "universal health care" show remarkably little interest -- usually none -- in finding out what that phrase turns out to mean in practice, in those countries where it already exists, such as Britain, Sweden or Canada.

For one thing, "universal health care" in these countries means months of waiting for surgery that American get in a matter of weeks or even days.

In these and other countries, it means having only a fraction as many MRIs and other high-tech medical devices available per person as in the United States.

In Sweden, it means not only having bureaucrats deciding what medicines the government will and will not pay for, but even preventing you from buying the more expensive medicine for yourself with your own money. That would violate the "equality" that is the magic mantra.

Those who think in terms of talking points, instead of trying to understand realities, make much of the fact that some countries with government-controlled medical care have longer life expectancies than that in the United States.

That is where the difference between health care and medical care comes in. Medical care is what doctors can do for you. Health care includes what you do for yourself -- such as diet, exercise and lifestyle.

If a doctor arrives on the scene to find you wiped out by a drug overdose or shot through the heart by some of your rougher companions, there may not be much that he can do except sign the death certificate.

Even for things that take longer to do you in -- obesity, alcohol, cholesterol, tobacco -- doctors can tell you what to do or not do, but whether you follow their advice or not is what determines the outcome.

Americans tend to be more obese, consume more drugs and have more homicides. None of that is going to change with "universal health care" because it isn't health care. It is medical care.

When it comes to things where medical care itself makes the biggest difference -- cancer survival rates, for example -- Americans do much better than people in most other countries.

No one who compares medical care in this country with medical care in other countries is likely to want to switch. But those who cannot be bothered with the facts may help destroy the best medical care in the world by falling for political rhetoric.

This short story was written when I still lived in Ukraine in the early 1990s. It was intended to be a chapter in a fact-based novel, as yet unpublished. Although the Communist Party had been officially disbanded, it still maintained a firm grip on the country, using every means of manipulation available. Proponents of leftist ideologies around the world share one common trait: they always demand to be included, but once you let them in, they force everybody else out, while refusing to leave themselves.

Who is Bernardine Dohrn ?

http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/individualProfile.asp?indid=2190

Who is William Ayers ?

http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/individualProfile.asp?indid=2169

In 1974 Dohrn co-authored -- along with Bill Ayers (her future husband), Jeff Jones, and Celia Sojourn -- a book titled Prairie Fire:
The Politics of Revolutionary Anti-Imperialism.

The title Prairie Fire was an allusion to Mao Zedong's observation (in a January 1930 letter) that "a single spark can start a prairie fire."
Dohrn's book was dedicated to a bevy of violent, America-hating revolutionaries, including Sirhan Sirhan (assassin of Robert F.
Kennedy).

House Democratic leaders, including Speaker Nancy Pelosi (Calif.), have ratcheted up the pressure on their rank-and-file members to oppose a resolution calling for an ethics committee investigation into the ties between key Democrats and a controversial defense-lobbying firm.

Democratic leaders have told their members they should let the ethics panel do its work and stop supporting a measure sponsored by Rep. Jeff Flake (R-Ariz.) that calls for an ethics probe into political donations from the now-defunct PMA Group lobbying firm and earmarks its clients received. . . . The pressure appears to be working. Reps. Ron Kind (D-Wis.) and Tim Walz (D-Minn.), two of more than two dozen Democrats who supported Flake’s measure in the latest vote, on April 1, are now wavering. . . . The week before the recess, Kind told The Hill that a cloud will be hanging over all House Democrats until their leaders address the PMA controversy. The quote was repeated in a New York Times editorial calling for an ethics committee investigation into the PMA controversy.

Pelosi is in a particularly difficult position. Rep. John Murtha (D-Pa.), a Pelosi ally, has close ties to PMA and its clients, as do Reps. Pete Visclosky (D-Ind.) and Jim Moran (D-Va.).

President Barack Obama continued his worldwide apology tour at the Organization of American States over the weekend. Much like his trip to Europe was spent emphasizing his break with the previous Administration on several fronts, this trip was all about the new direction America will take - one that will apparently leave Venezuela's brave democrats in the dust, but that's for another post.

Of course, new Administrations usually spend their first few months emphasizing their differences with their respective predecessors. John F. Kennedy tried to project his youthful image and vigor into nearly every foreign policy issue. Eight years later, Richard Nixon's messages to Moscow and Beijing were more subtle (and kept a secret from the American people), but Mao and Brezhnev understood them fairly quickly. Jimmy Carter tried to turn thirty years of American history on its head in one commencement speech. If conventional wisdom is to be believed, Reagan got the point across to Tehran even before he was inaugurated. Despite running as Reagan's heir, even George Bush the Elder spent his first year emphasizing a closer relationship with continental European allies. Bill Clinton spent nearly two years loudly announcing differences from the previous twelve. Bush the Younger's divergence on Kyoto and other European multilateral efforts are now the stuff of legends, but Asian democracies quickly noticed that he paid more attention to them than - arguably - any president in American history.

Thus, it should not surprise us that, roughly 100 days into his term of office, Obama is mainly emphasizing contrasts with the person he succeeded - and against whom he railed for nearly two years. Sadly, and more tellingly, are the areas where the President has chosen not to strike new ground or ask forgiveness for past errors.

For example, we have yet to see, and probably never will see, Obama apologize to the Chinese people for nearly 20 years of neglect while "engagement" with the corrupt Chinese Communist Party set the tone for every previous post-Tiananmen presidency.

We neither have nor likely ever will have witnessed Obama ask the forgiveness of the people of northern Korea for allowing so many of their loved ones to starve to death, be murdered, and/or be tortured to death while Kim Jong-il played two presidents for fools over fourteen years. Likewise, Japan has heard no regrets for the nerve-wracking missile launches that were largely received with a shrug and a slew of useless words from the United Nations.

Obama has offered a regret-soaked olive branch to Tehran - but only for the mullahcracy and its sycophants. The long-suffering Iranian people received the same cold shoulder that has been shown to them for decades.

Any of the above apologies would be different from the easy and empty ones the Administration has been spouting. The apologies I propose would involve recognition of weakness and lack of nerve at critical times. More importantly, they would show an Administration willing to do the hard work necessary to achieve a true, lasting peace - because it understood that could only come with freedom.

Ironically enough, Obama can look to George W. Bush for the best example of this. In May of 2005, Bush expressed his regrets for the Yalta agreement that handed Eastern Europe over to the Communists. The dramatic gesture helped seal the peoples of Eastern Europe as America's closest allies, and emphasized the danger of thinking a deal with a tyrant today is worth his exploitation of it tomorrow. Unfortunately, that may be the very reason Obama does not consider it worthy as a precedent. This Administration appears to have no concern about what our tyrannical enemies will do with their newfound opportunities, namely: 1) bind America to agreements they have no intention of honoring, 2) repeatedly raising the bar just to see how high the president will jump for them, and 3) using the smiles and handshakes to ostracize and persecute those who would lead their victims to overthrow them and take their countries back.

Even as we take in the reaction from the OAS gathering, the Taliban continues to gain strength in Pakistan, North Korea is getting back in the plutonium business, and Iran is moving forward in both nuclear weapons and repression of its citizens. All the while, the regime that aides them - the Chinese Communist Party - continues to avoid blame or consequences.

For that, this president owes all of us an apology.

U.S. Education Secretary Arne Duncan has signed a formal educational partnership agrement with the Peoples Republic of China, a Communist regime that, according to the U.S. State Department, subjects political dissidents to re-education through labor.

Duncan signed the 2009 Joint Statement of Exchange and Cooperation with the Chinese Minister of Education Zhou Ji on April 16.

The documents signed by both Secretary Duncan and Zhou Ji include, among other items, the following initiatives:

“The U.S. Network for Education Information (USNEI) Web site be expanded to include links to the academic accreditation Web site in China and other countries (timeline 2009 and forward), and MOE links to USNEI.”

“Consultation with the higher education community (academic institutions and organizations) take place on direct collaboration with China or the United States that includes the sharing of best teaching practices and deepening of existing ties (timeline 2009-2013).”

State Councilor Madame Liu, the highest ranking woman in the Chinese government, was the spokesperson for the Communist Chinese dignitaries at the meeting.

“Secretary Duncan, you have been so courageous in carrying out reform in the field of education, I’m sure that’s also the reason why President Obama has nominated you as the education secretary,” she said through a translator.

“Cooperation in education between our two countries can go way back into the past as a long tradition and also meets our immediate needs,” she said.

Duncan said that the United States of America and the Peoples Republic of China face similar challenges.

“It amazes me how absolutely similar the challenges are and the huge sense of urgency that we both share,” said Duncan at the meeting.

“We worry a lot about equality of opportunity and we think the only way to move children and families out of poverty is through quality education,” said Duncan. “We also think we have to raise the bar and raise standards for everybody because our expectations are too low.”

Leading human rights activist and Nobel Peace Prize-nominee Harry Wu, who has documented many of China's human rights abuses and crimes, said the United States cannot learn anything from the Communist Chinese educational system.

"The United States cannot learn anything from China, okay?" he said. "But we [the Chinese] want to go there to study the systems and study the culture and find out the best way for America to handle the China case."

The State Department's Human Rights Report on China, dated Feb. 25, 2009, states that the Chinese government puts political dissidents into reeducation through labor camps.

"The government reportedly continued to limit access to mosques, detain citizens for possession of unauthorized religious texts, imprison citizens for religious activities determined to be 'extremist,' pressure Muslims who were fasting to eat during Ramadan, and confiscate Muslims' passports to strengthen control over Muslim pilgrimages," the report reads.

"Following violent clashes in western Xinjiang during the Olympic Games, XUAR (Xinjiang Uyghur Autonomous Region) authorities imposed widespread detentions, restricted movement within the XUAR, and established curfews in some cities," reads the report.

"XUAR party secretary Wang Lequan declared in September that the XUAR government would carry out 'preemptive attacks,' implement 'antiseparatist reeducation' across the region, and increase policing of religious groups."

Harry Wu said you cannot compare China's way of governing with that of the United States.

"The Communist Party is talking about dictatorship; talking about totalitarian. How to handle the dissidents – that is Laogai [re-education] camps," said Wu.

"You cannot [function in China] without it. Laogai and freedom and democracy are incompatible. That is very clear," he said.

The Laogai Research Foundation estimates there are at least 1,000 laogai prisons functioning in Communist China today, holding more than 6 million prisoners. The Black Book of Communism (Harvard University Press) estimates that at least 65 million people have been killed or died as a result of China's Communist policies.

Perhaps, the report I saw was for MCW on 9063 at 0800 on Wednesday, also others earlier in the week, some using AM.

Certainly not MCW. I will make it a point to record it next time.
They broadcasted a dead carrier most of the time, then data bursts over AM. That is, I never saw the signal strength drop. So I have to assume this is meant to be received on pretty low tech gear, like a cheap shortwave radio into a soundcard.

President Obama showed his hand this week when The New York Times wrote that he is considering converting the stock the government owns in our country’s banks from preferred stock, which it now holds, to common stock.

This seemingly insignificant change is momentous. It means that the federal government will control all of the major banks and financial institutions in the nation. It means socialism.

The Times dutifully dressed up the Obama plan as a way to avoid asking Congress for more money for failing banks. But the implications of the proposal are obvious to anyone who cares to look.

When the Troubled Asset Relief Program (TARP) intervention was first outlined by the Bush administration, it did not call for any transfer of stock, of any sort, to the government. The Democrats demanded, as a price for their support, that the taxpayers “get something back” for the money they were lending to the banks. House Republicans, wise to what was going on, rejected the administration’s proposal and sought, instead, to provide insurance to banks, rather than outright cash. Their plan would, of course, not involve any transfer of stock. But Sen. John McCain (R-Ariz.) undercut his own party’s conservatives and went along with the Democratic plan, ensuring its passage.

But to avoid the issue of a potential for government control of the banks, everybody agreed that the stock the feds would take back in return for their money would be preferred stock, not common stock. “Preferred” means that these stockholders get the first crack at dividends, but only common stockholders can actually vote on company management or policy. Now, by changing this fundamental element of the TARP plan, Obama will give Washington a voting majority among the common stockholders of these banks and other financial institutions. The almost 500 companies receiving TARP money will be, in effect, run by Washington.

And whoever controls the banks controls the credit and, therefore, the economy. That’s called socialism.

Obama is dressing up the idea of the switch to common stock by noting that the conversion would provide the banks with capital they could use without a further taxpayer appropriation. While this is true, it flies in the face of the fact that an increasing number of big banks and brokerage houses are clamoring to give back the TARP money. Goldman-Sachs, for example, wants to buy back its freedom, as do many banks. Even AIG is selling off assets to dig its way out from under federal control. The reason, of course, is that company executives do not like the restrictions on executive pay and compensation that come with TARP money. It is for this reason that Chrysler Motors refused TARP funds.

With bank profits up and financial institutions trying to give back their money, there is no need for the conversion of the government stock from preferred to common – except to advance the political socialist agenda of this administration.

Meanwhile, to keep its leverage over the economy intact, the Obama administration is refusing to let banks and other companies give back the TARP money until they pass a financial “stress test.” Nominally, the government justifies this procedure by saying that it does not want companies to become fully private prematurely and then need more help later on. But don’t believe it. They want to keep the TARP money in the banks so they can have a reason and rationale to control them.

The Times story did not influence the dialogue of the day. People were much more concerned with the death of 21 horses at a polo match. Much as we will miss these noble animals, we will miss our economic freedom more.

Who wants stock - preferred, common, or otherwise - in an insolvent business? You only want stock in a business you actually think is going to be profitable - and any bank whose mortgages largely were "subprime" ones or who gave credit to literally anyone never will be profitable. Dick Morris misses the math; if the regime takes on "ownership" of such money-losing businesses, the regime itself goes broke.

Obamao, you ignorant slut. :)

I know you're ignorant that there are chronic medical conditions like diabetes and cancer which require daily expense and routine medical management which is not available from an emergency room.

I know that you are ignorant that over 18,000 Americans die every year directly due to lack of available medical care.

I know you are a raving lunatic with no regard whatsoever for facts.

When Bush left office, 17% of Americans thought we were going in the right direction as a nation. Now it's 46% that thinks we are going in the right direction.

How does it feel to be among the dumbest 17% of Americans, and so out of touch with reality?

Kook.

I've even been checking out the Fox Nation, but that's really

If you knew anything, you'd realize that the Huffington Post has opinions in the left column, straight news in the middle column, and such. Anybody capable of critical thinking would have no trouble

Useful Idiots are naïve, foolish, ignorant of facts, unrealistically idealistic, dreamers, willfully in denial or deceptive. They hail from the ranks of the chronically unhappy, the anarchists, the aspiring revolutionaries, the neurotics who are at war with life, the disaffected alienated from government, corporations, and just about any and all institutions of society. The Useful Idiot can be a billionaire, a movie star, an academe of renown, a politician, or from any other segment of the population.

Arguably, the most dangerous Useful Idiot is the “Politically Correct.” He is the master practitioner of euphemism, hedging, doubletalk, and outright deception.

The Useful Idiot derives satisfaction from being anti-establishment. He finds perverse gratification in aiding the forces that aim to dismantle an existing order, whatever it may be: an order he neither approves of nor he feels he belongs to.

The Useful Idiot is conflicted and dishonest. He fails to look inside himself and discover the causes of his own problems and unhappiness while he readily enlists himself in causes that validate his distorted perception.

Understandably, it is easier to blame others and the outside world than to examine oneself with an eye to self-discovery and self-improvement. Furthermore, criticizing and complaining—liberal practices of the Useful Idiot—require little talent and energy. The Useful Idiot is a great armchair philosopher and “Monday Morning Quarterback.”

The Useful Idiot is not the same as a person who honestly has a different point of view. A society without honest and open differences of views is a dead society. Critical, different and fresh ideas are the life blood of a living society—the very anathema of autocracies where the official position is sacrosanct.

Even the “normal” spends a great deal more energy aiming to fix things out there than working to overcome his own flaws and shortcomings, or contribute positively to the larger society. People don’t like to take stock of what they are doing or not doing that is responsible for the conditions they disapprove.

The Useful Idiot, among other things, is a master practitioner of scapegoating. He assigns blame to others while absolving himself of responsibility, has a long handy list of candidates for blaming anything and everything, and by living a distorted life, he contributes to the ills of society.

The Useful Idiot may even engage in willful misinformation and deception when it suits him.

I use a loop, but here in Flanders there are 786 people/ square km, so we

I remember the old Chief Pontiac logo/emblem thingys on Pontiac cars.Pontiac used to make trucks too.Not too many years ago, I used to see a guy in Jackson driving an old vintage Pontiac truck.

The old Plymouth Ship logo/emblem thingy,,, most people think that means a Ship.Not so, it was a brand name of twine/string.

There used to be a coal company (I think it was a coal company, I have many, many books here about the history of American autos and trucks) that had the bowtie logo thingy long before Chevrolet.One of the Chevrolet brothers went to Europe to visit his relatives.When he got back to America, the Chevrolet company had thrown the name of Chevrolet on to a cheaper quality car by the name of Liddle (something like that) The Chevrolet guy threw his stock papers down and he stormed out of the office, mad as hell.He wound up working on the assembly line.

On the funding of the Cameroon-Sudan Railway, Saifee Durbar replied:

Well, it’s simply a viable project. All the ships that go by the Mediterranean and the Suez Canal dream of a railway that would provide access to the farthest reaches of the continent. Travel time would be reduced by 14 days for freight being sent to the Central African Republic. Furthermore, a project of this nature will contribute to an environment of peace in Sudan because all the civil wars that we have been seeing in the region can only be resolved through development and improved transportation. For a wealthy country, rich in lumber, agriculture and immense mineral deposits, improving transportation is imperative.

This is a story about a fledgling family at America’s most famous address, an inspiring saga about new beginnings, the audacity of hope and perhaps even dreams from a father.

What's Obama done for YOU? Today, retired professors and their dependents became the latest group of older Americans that His Royal Blackness is throwing under the bus - as the huge professor pension plan TIAA/CREF sent them letters announcing their CREF retirement checks would be reduced 45% due to Wall Street's problems. What's Obama doing for them - or for the countless GM retirees now facing drastic cuts in their pensions and benefits in the impending bankruptcy of GM?

That's about half the country right there.

How about the Muslim extremists? Should we ignore them?

You are right for once. The Obomination preaches stupidity.

> RHF: The definition of confusion.

So what else is new.

> Why are conservatives so desperate in their attempts to oppose Obama?

Because he is a liberal pushing a liberal agenda, a continual embarrassment to our country every time he meets leaders of other countries, preaching stupidity on any subject.

Probably the worst move he has made is Klintoon for secretary of state practically guaranteeing continued diversion toward our country as a super power.

The Cuban is not particularly high power. Others can be heard with relative ease, unless you are in Miami.

The most likely Spanish language station will be RCN (Erray - Say - Enney) Barranquilla, 50 kw, from the North Coast of Colombia. This is widely heard in Auroral condition evenings, and would likely be heard if conditions are reasonable. A second, but less widely heard, station from South America is Radio Quito which is one of the high power Ecuadorians which has not yet reduced power on AM (or moved to FM).

KGU used to be heard in the Northeast decades ago when 760 was quiet on Monday morning, but was never the signal of the 10 kw Honolulu station on 650.

WORA is "NotiUno" and is 24/7 with talk programming. However, it is directional to the East, so very unlikely. As noted by Bart, KFMB is very directional to the West, and is a very difficult catch in the nulls. Same goes for CFLD.

I Hate Hate (R. Bailey)

Here's a song I want Everybody to listen to It's talking about love
And it's talking about hate

You know, I think the only way We're gonna do away with hate is To get so much love going around
That there just won't be any more hate

There's so much hate going on today
On the right and on the left
You see, we hate our brothers
Yes, we do, and we hate our own self

There's even hate going on today
Between the young folks and the old Can't see all this hate is really Eating up our very soul

That's why I'm singing now
I hate hate, everybody listen to me
I hate hate, all sing together now
I hate hate, the good Lord above
Don't you know I love love
I really, really love love

Alright, I want you to listen
To this next little verse
If you feel like it, sing along
And if you don't wanna sing along Maybe you can clap your hands

The good book says
To love your enemy
But we don't comprehend
Tell me, how can you love your enemy
When you hate your fellow man

You see, love's got the
All-time greatest power
You see, love can brighten up
Your darkest hour

That's why I'm singing now
I hate hate, everybody sing it with me
I hate hate, let's all get together now
I hate hate, the good Lord above
Don't you know I love love
Oh, you got to have love

Got to have love
Love, love, got to have love
Love, love, got to have love.....

Not so bright are you? I'm not Religious in any way. I don't care for religion at all. I am Not a Republican, and you were wrong with all the rest too.

I believe in saving all life, Death row and the babies in the womb, Government doesn't have the right to take life but we do have the right to take our own life. We have a right to life Liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That is a right the Government can't take.

Without that one "life" the other two are moot points.

> your time unless you feed him bacon. They he MAY see things your way till

This story isn't about torture, it's about getting the Republicans for Bill Clinton's IMPEACHMENT..... This is all about revenge. That's why I say if you prosecute anyone you have to prosecute everyone involved. That means Nancy Pelosi will take a fall for Clinton getting revenge, while Hillary may be culpable, she is far to experienced with a shredder to get charged with this. But Hillary will watch Pelosi go down in flames and never bat an eye.

The Clinton Smear Machine is still going after Sarah Palin, because Hillary is determined she will be the "FIRST" woman President. Obama is laying the ground work for the Republican smear fest and when Obama is tossed out in 4 years, Hillary will be planning her Presidency.

> http://pics.nase-bohren.de/dietcoke-bacon.jpg

Obama is marked as a Socialist(with his pal Chavez) and he won't be getting elected again... this scam with the media slobbering all over Obama and the white house trying with the Propaganda press to keep Obama's numbers artificially high is going to fail as the economy fails.

Barney sounds like YOU are the racist here
Why do you lieberls get so upset if a minority, afemale or God forhibid a gay American happens to believe in the values of conservatism. the Republicans or the values that helped to make this nation a great nation The complete and utter lack of tolerance on the part of liberals in the nation is astonishing, not really suprising considering that you and your kind think that every Americans should kowtow to your concieted why "We are superior" attitude. Most conservatives I know have a live and let live attitude to persons on your myopic ideological bent.
